BY VICTOR BARRON.

Notwithstanding the prolonged period of business depression, Atlanta and Georgia, the entire south and nation have much to be thankful for this year.

We have emerged from probably the severest worldwide economic and financial readjustment in history with our business structure, our agricultural foundation, universities, common schools and practically every known material and artificial make-up standing at the highest peak of perfection and upon a new and stronger foundation than ever known since the origin of Thanksgiving in the United States more than three centuries ago, when the Pilgrims celebrated the harvest of their first crop.

Throughout America today there is rising a new era of living and a more substantial foundation upon which the future progress and prosperity of the nation will rest.

No section of the United States is more thankful for the blessings bestowed upon it than Georgia and the southeast. Soon Georgia will celebrate its 200th anniversary. And as great as our development and prosperity has been, greater looms the future.

Atlanta is the heart and center of not only one of the most progressive states in the Union, but the empire state of the new south. It stands today perched upon the highest business skyline in its history, which dates back nearly 100 years—a vast wilderness transformed into a beautiful, progressive and growing commercial and industrial city.

On the eve of Thanksgiving the industrial bureau of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce made public statistics showing that Atlanta continues its forward commercial and industrial strides even during the severe business depression.

The statistics, issued by Frank Shaw, secretary of the bureau, show that 82 new concerns have located in Atlanta within the last 10 months, giving employment to approximately 1,515 persons with an approximate annual payroll of $1,977,500.

This compares with 110 new concerns for the entire year of 1930, giving employment to 1,899 persons and representing an annual payroll of $2,832,720.

Atlanta's record for 10 months ending October 31, last, compares with only 83 new concerns for the entire year of 1925 when the industrial bureau was organized. This was the formation of the Forward Atlanta commission, which launched a nationwide advertising program of Atlanta and its advantages.

By The Associated Press.

United States Ambassador Dawes announced last night that his government approved the League of Nations council resolution asking the Japanese to evacuate occupied areas in Manchuria as soon as conditions of security permit.

Telegrams warning the Japanese and Chinese governments to refrain from military activities in the Chinchow region while the work of mediation was in progress were ordered dispatched by the council.

The day's military activities led observers in Mukden to foresee that the Japanese army would launch a general offensive against Chinchow in an effort to drive the last Chinese soldier in southwest Manchuria beyond the Great Wall.

General Yang Chen, Chinese commander in Chinchow, declared that if the Japanese attacked he would resist to the limit of his resources.

The strategic town of Hsinmintun, located about halfway between Mukden and Chinchow on the Peiping-Mukden railway, was captured by a Japanese detachment with hardly a struggle, Peiping learned.

Japanese government reservations in acceptance of the League's latest proposal confirmed the belief of observers in Tokyo that the way was being paved for an onslaught on Chinchow.

About 13,000 Chinese students were on the way to Nanking from Shanghai, after a riot near the railway station. It is demanded that the government declare war on Japan.

Dispatches were published in Moscow relating to discovery of a syndicate which was alleged to be selling arms to Chinese military chieftains in northern Manchuria. A number of Japanese customs officials and clerks were arrested.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—The United States government and the council of the League of Nations stood side by side tonight behind the council's proposal to bring peace to Manchuria.

More than 5,000 spectators saw Decatur High defeat University School, 7 to 0, Friday night at Decatur, in the seventh evening game of the season. The victory gave Decatur its second successive N. G. Details of the game are contained in the sporting pages of this issue.

Annulment Shatters Romance
Of Thornwell Jacobs Jr. and Bride

The romance of a university president's son and a railroad vice president's daughter was terminated abruptly Wednesday when their marriage was annulled.

Dr. Thornwell Jacobs Jr., married Miss Virginia E. Hamilton at Plymouth, Ind. Young Jacobs is the son of Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, president of Oglethorpe University, and the girl is the daughter of Thomas Benton Hamilton, vice president of the Pennsylvania railroad system and one of the most prominent rail executives in America.

Wednesday Judge Albert Chapman granted an annulment to the marriage on complaint of the bride's mother that her daughter is a minor. In their application for a wedding license the girl gave her age as 18, but in her petition for an annulment Mrs. Benton stated her daughter is only 16 years of age. Young Jacobs gave his age as 21.

Jacobs was a guest at the Hamilton cottage last night, but planned to leave today for Atlanta to resume his studies at Oglethorpe. He had nothing to say concerning the marriage or annulment.

Dr. Jacobs said Wednesday night he had been apprised of the annulment proceedings, but beyond that declined to comment on the matter.

The romance began this summer when Jacobs was a student at Culver Military Academy. At that time the Benton family lived in a summer cottage on the shores of Lake Maxinkuckee, one of the most picturesque lakes in Indiana. Until recently young Jacobs was a guest at the Benton summer residence, and last Monday evening he and Miss Hamilton motor-

Thanksgiving Spirit Typified by Lovely Miss Rena Candler

Thanksgiving Day

MISS RENA CANDLER, beautiful sub-deb, and the handsome bronze turkey she is holding represent the sentiment of Thanksgiving Day, symbolized in America with material blessings and spiritual thankfulness. Miss Candler, the lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Candler, and the proud gobbler form a picture which perfectly carries the message of the festival inaugurated more than 300 years ago, when Pilgrim fathers set apart a day for returning thanks for their first harvest in 1621. They dedicated the day to God, offering praise and gratitude that their small band had been brought safely through the perils and hardships of those pioneer days. Atlanta tables will be laden today and the hearts of citizens will glow with grateful appreciation for the blessings of the last year and with renewed faith for the months to come. Families will reunite, friends will gather and every handclasp will carry the sentiment of the day. Photo by Kenneth Rogers, staff photographer.

BY JAMES W. DOUTHAT.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—(AP)—In a flower-banked resting place in Arlington national cemetery, Dr. Samuel W. Small was buried today with the full military honors accorded those who have fought in the nation's wars.

His ashes were lowered into a grave that overlooks the historic Potomac river and faces the Arlington amphitheater, where rests the body of the Unknown Soldier.

The procession, led by a military band playing softly the strains of a funeral march, stopped at the foot of a hill at the top of which General Nelson A. Miles, another veteran of the Spanish-American War, is buried.

As troops from Fort Myer stood at attention and a flag at the amphitheater hung at half-staff, two services—the military and Masonic—were read at the grave of the 80-year-old newspaperman, soldier and evangelist, who died Saturday in Atlanta. He was

Traditional Spirit of Cheer Rules Thanksgiving Day Here

As consciously grateful as the Pilgrim fathers in 1621, Atlantans today will share alike in material and spiritual blessings. It is Thanksgiving.

Symbolizing the day in material display, rich and poor will partake of Thanksgiving food—perhaps not turkey in every case, for there are many empty hands and pockets this year. Yet, there will be no hunger to depress sentiment, relief workers said when word was passed that good substantial food would be waiting at community centers for those in want.

With its spirit of hope and cheer Thanksgiving brought the first real touch of winter and with the dawn will come near freezing weather, the United States weather bureau predicted. Thermometers were scheduled to show readings of 35 degrees.

Spiritual solace will find renewed inspiration given by church services and those who know divine truth will express gratitude for blessings and hope for the coming days. Friendly hands will carry a firmer greeting and warm hearts will glow with brotherly love.

Every day activity will pause and the wheels of government will stop.

TIME CHANGE SEEN AS AID TO MOTHERS

Campaign Committee.

Mothers and children will benefit through adoption of eastern time for Atlanta, it was pointed out Wednesday by proponents of the change, and at the same time J. Henson Tatum, registrar, announced that 19,833 persons are qualified to cast ballots December 2 in the referendum to be held on the subject.

Further inroads into the ranks of labor was shown through the advocacy of the proposal by various other leaders and the statement issued by the campaign committee favoring the change.

Reports that the Georgia Power Company is fighting the proposed time change was refuted in a letter from Preston S. Arkwright, president, which the committee released as a part of its statement.

Although Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta schools, and Jere A. Wells, who holds the same position in the Fulton county system, have declined to take any active stand in the campaign.

History Is Reversed as White Men Fight Snow, Cold to Rescue Indians

GALLUP, N. M., Nov. 25.—(AP)—Four dead Indians were found tonight by the first rescue crew to reach some of the thousands of more Navajo and Zuni tribesmen snowbound atop high, barren mesas 70 miles south of Gallup.

A party of horsemen who reached a Zuni village after hours of struggle through deeply drifted snow said a family of three Indians and a baby were frozen to death. The family was found in the vicinity of Alamogordo.

No report was made of 14 other families supposed to be in the same camp.

Thanksgiving history was reversed as white men joined in fighting snowdrifts and bitter cold in an effort to carry food to the Indians.

On the eve of the anniversary of the first Thanksgiving, celebrated by the pilgrim fathers and friendly Redmen, just 310 years ago, a group of Simpson said the incident demonstrated there was "something fundamentally wrong" with the farmers' position.

LEAGUE RENEWS ATTACK ON HOOVER IN NAVY DISPUTE

Fresh Denunciation Is Group's Answer to President's Demand for Apology on Charges.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Instead of the apology demanded by President Hoover, the Navy League tonight issued a new denunciation of his naval policies and an assertion that no errors in its figures on comparative naval strengths had been revealed.

It attacked in vigorous language the report of the committee which Mr. Hoover appointed to weigh the truth of its previous assertions. This document, which had charged it with "inaccuracies, false assertions and erroneous conclusions," was described by the league as containing errors itself.

The president was assailed with assertions that he had failed to carry out the pledges of the 1928 republican platform, that he had not provided for replacing obsolete vessels or for building the fleet up to treaty levels. It terms his naval building record "unconstructive."

Tonight's statement was issued over the signature of Walter Bruce Howe, the chairman of the league's board of directors. Previous statements which aroused the president's indignation were signed by William Howard Gardiner, president of the league.

Rejoinder Promised.

A full rejoinder to the allegations of the Hoover jury was promised later. This may be issued by Gardiner.

The president's row with the league was precipitated by a statement charging him with "abysmal ignorance" of the purpose and needs of the navy. It ridiculed his proposal that food-bearing ships are immunized from attack in time of severe storm. Food supplies of the navy holiday proposed by Foreign Minister Grandi, of Italy, and later made effective under the League of Nations, had originated in Washington.

The president was quick to reply. The very next evening he issued a statement charging Gardiner and the league with disseminating "untruths and distortions of fact." He announced he would appoint a committee to include league members which

Tom Mix Continues In Critical Condition

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Nov. 25.—(AP)—An iron physique built on the cattle plains of the west may save Tom Mix from death from peritonitis.

Late tonight it was reported by physicians to be resting well.

The infection, often deadly and only a short time ago the cause of the death of a brilliant young actor, Robert Williams, developed when Mix's appendix ruptured late Monday night.

An emergency operation was performed and doctors said today they only could hope for the actor's life.

"We cannot tell as yet how virulent the infection is," Dr. R. N. Smith, one of the three attending physicians said. "Mix was in marvelous physical condition. That may pull him through. In two days, if he lives that long, we will be able to tell what the outcome will be."

PALO ALTO, Cal., Nov. 25.—(AP)—Physicians tonight dispatched a second emergency shipment of a serum being used for Tom Mix, cowboy screen star, to Los Angeles, where the actor is seriously ill.

NEW LAWS SOUGHT BY FARM LEADERS

Plan To Aid Agriculture

BY NATHAN ROBERTSON.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—(AP)—A "paper loss" of $102,000,000 has been sustained by the farm board up to the present in its gigantic stabilization operations in wheat and cotton.

This information was furnished to the senate agriculture committee today by Chairman Stone of the board as farm leaders were providing ammunition for the 1932 presidential election by demands for strengthening the agricultural marketing act.

Stone pointed out that the losses in wheat and cotton stabilization activities were not actual and might be entirely wiped out before the operations were completed.

Based on the current values of the board's holdings, however, it has incurred a loss of $102,000,000 in wheat and $75,000,000 in cotton.

Farm leaders forgot their differences as they mixed old remedies with new and demanding strengthening of the law by adding the export debenture, the equalization fee, or something else to take care of surplus crops.

The committee is considering whether to recommend extending the life of the board, abolishing it, or changing its functions.

Farm leaders who asked the additional legislation included Louis J. Taber, master of the National Grange; Edward A. O'Neal, president of the Farm Bureau Federation; John A. Simpson, president of the Farmers' Union; and Ralph Snyder, of the national committee of farm organizations.

A fifth witness, J. W. Garrow, of the American Cotton Shippers' Association, bitterly attacked the board's stabilization operations and demanded a congressional investigation.

A dozen senators, some members of the committee and others not, listened to the demands of the farm leaders and questioned them closely on their programs. The committee sharply divided on the various relief plans.

Testimony covered a wide field, including farm credit, money problems, unemployment relief and Muscle Shoals.

Taber urged the committee to adopt the export debenture plan which President Hoover vigorously opposed two years ago, but pleaded for some legislation to strengthen the law in regard to the disposition of surplus crops, regardless of the name it carried.

O'Neal advanced the federation's pet plan, the equalization fee, which President Coolidge twice vetoed. He said his organization was ready to "merge its position" with other proper plans.

Inadequate," O'Neal says.

The board's operations, he has revealed that the present law is not

ATHENS LEADERS FAVOR 'FAST' TIME

School, College, Business
Officials Indorse Change to Eastern Reckoning.

ATHENS, Ga., Nov. 25.—When asked by The Constitution tonight for his opinion on the value of eastern standard time versus central time, Dr. S. V. Sanford, dean of the University of Georgia, said: "It would be more convenient to all concerned if all Georgia cities would adopt a uniform time system. It is no more difficult to hold a class at 8 o'clock eastern time than 8 o'clock central time. It is certainly a blessing to have an additional hour for recreation after work each day before dark."

"I hope Atlanta will adopt eastern standard time because I believe it would mean much for the health, happiness and progress of the city."

Athens adopted eastern standard time about 25 years ago and there has been no attempt to change the system since that time.

Mrs. Paul W. Chapman, president of the Athens P. T. A. council, said: "Our schools open at 9 o'clock, eastern standard time, and so far as I know the mothers are satisfied with the present system and would not advocate a change to slow time."

Andrew C. Erwin, secretary-treasurer of the Southern Mutual Insurance Company and member of the board of directors, Georgia Power Company, said: "I find that business, schools and industrial enterprises operate more smoothly and more efficiently in Athens under eastern standard time. The people of Athens are now overwhelmingly in favor of eastern time. In my opinion eastern standard time should be adopted by all Georgia cities, because of its unquestionable benefits."

David B. Michael, secretary-treasurer of Michael's, Inc., one of the largest department stores in the state and also member of the board of education, said that "Eastern standard time is of infinitely more value, economically, and from the standpoint of health and social well-being. For our employees eastern time is better because it gives them an hour more of daylight, and we find that in operating our store it is much better than slow time. By adopting eastern time Atlanta would be in line with the business operations of the country. Eastern time is better for the children, because it gives them more daylight hours in school an hour before dark, which can be utilized in play and other beneficial pursuits."

R. Arnold, secretary-treasurer of the Mallory Braided Cord Mill and former mayor, said: "Industrially, eastern standard time is better than central time because it enables the employees to have more daylight leisure time, particularly in the summer. Eastern standard time, in my opinion, is better than slow time from the standpoint of business and schools with the opportunity to leave off work with an extra hour of daylight remaining which can be utilized in many ways beneficial to the community and the individual."

R. H. Glynn, manager, J. C. Penney Company, said: "I was accustomed to central time when I came to Atlanta a few years ago, but I find that eastern time has outstanding benefits, chief of which is the additional daylight it gives to the business world, particularly in the summer."

Force seeking the change were strengthened Wednesday when it was pointed out that the move started at 7 o'clock in the morning to get their children ready for 8:30 o'clock classes, could start at 7:30 o'clock. This would mean that they would have half an hour more rest in the morning, and that if the children go to bed at the same time they go now, the mothers would have an extra half-hour rest at night.

West, Mitchell Want Change. B. Graham West, city comptroller, and Alderman Farris A. Mitchell, of the fourth ward, were two high city officials who Wednesday said they would vote for eastern time.

"I have long been one of the exponents of the change," West said. "I shall vote for and work for the change."

"I will vote for the change," Mitchell said. "I feel it would be the best thing for Atlanta."

Eastern time campaign headquarters released for publication the following letter from Jack Strouss, assistant secretary of the Atlanta Motor Club, in answering complaints that

Negro, Doomed to Die, Pardoned by Gardner

RALEIGH, N. C., Nov. 25.—(AP) This Thanksgiving Eve brought James Smith, a North Carolina negro, possibly the last man in the world for joining the rest of the country in considering tomorrow something more than just the 26th of November, 1931.

This morning James awoke in a narrow cell at the state prison here, under sentence of death in the electric chair.

Tough he went his way a free man, granted a full pardon today by Governor O. Max Gardner.

It was the second pardon issued by Governor Gardner in the three years he has been the state's chief executive. The first was to a young white man who was made the governor's chauffeur.

Smith was convicted of burglary and an attack upon a negro woman. The governor said an investigation established a bad reputation for the woman and that he had no doubt showed Smith should not have been convicted.

The club is not backing eastern time for Atlanta:

November 14, 1931.
"Mr. George W. West,
"Atlanta Chamber of Commerce,
"Answering your circular letter of November 9, wish to advise that the Atlanta Motor Club is heartily in favor of adopting eastern standard time for Atlanta, Georgia, and will make every effort possible to help put this change over between now and the time of the general election on December 2.

"Very truly yours,
"ATLANTA MOTOR CLUB,
(Signed)
"Jack Strouss,
"Assistant Secretary."

George R. Dunn, assistant manager here for the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Company, said Wednesday that Atlanta's central time works a great hardship on him in conducting his business and that he and his organization are wholeheartedly in favor of the movement to switch to eastern time.

Text of the statement released by the campaign committee follows:

"A change by the city of Atlanta to eastern standard time will mean much to the mothers of Atlanta and to the children. The change from central time to eastern time would be made probably on January 1 and for only one day would the clock be up of Atlanta's clocks be required."

"Although Superintendents Willis A. Sutton, of the city school system, and J. C. Penney, of the city hall, have declined to enter the campaign for the change in time, both have indicated that they will change the opening time of their schools from the present hour of 8:30 o'clock to 9 o'clock."

"This would enable mothers who now have to start getting their children ready for school at 7 o'clock in the morning for an 8:30 o'clock school opening to have half an hour's more rest in the morning, starting to get their children ready at 7:30 o'clock for 9 o'clock school."

"The children would go to bed at the same time they do now by the clock and would have, with their mothers, an extra half hour of daylight sleep in the morning, getting to school at 9 o'clock. The mothers would rest at the same time by the clock and, do now, but would have half an hour's more time for rest in the morning."

"Arkwright Denies Opposition. The heads of the Eastern Time Campaign Committee, hearing that the Georgia Power Company was opposed to eastern standard time for the city of Atlanta, addressed a letter to P. S. Arkwright, president of the Georgia Power Company, requesting that he inform them of the attitude of the Georgia Power Company with respect to eastern time for Atlanta, to be voted on in the election Wednesday, December 2.

"The committee received a reply from Mr. Arkwright and they were glad to note the contents as it was a true statement of the Georgia Power Company's interest in what is best for the city of Atlanta and this community as their attitude is the same as that of the Eastern Time Campaign Committee, which is to have the people be heard and whatever the expression is that we live by the decision of the people on the matter of eastern time, to be decided at the polls on December 2. Veteran Supreme Court Clerk Celebrates 89th Anniversary

Today will be something more than Thanksgiving Day for Zadok Daniel Harrison, veteran clerk of the Georgia Supreme Court.

Most unusual men, Mr. Harrison can today look back on a career seldom duplicated even in part. Honors have come to him in large measure through his long and varied service.

War days, through reconstruction and to later years filled with peace and happiness for him.

Thoughts of age are long, long thoughts in the past, but the thought of the past is the same thing of youth. Mr. Harrison's thoughts today are long beyond time, mellow beyond years, bright beyond the Thanksgiving sun.

On November 26, 1842, a son was born to Mr. and Mrs. George Washington Harrison in Randolph county, Georgia. He was christened Zadok Daniel, a name as whimsical as the quaint philosophy which was to be developed in later years. When he was 18 years old he was called from the campus at Old Midway and from his old camp, Sidney Lanier, to the Georgia Supreme Court. He returned the youth Harrison returned, but not to school.

On October 2, 1866, Judge Augustus Reese signed a license which authorized Mr. Harrison to practice law and in the following June he received a license to practice in the supreme court. He is today the oldest lawyer in Georgia.

For 60 years he has been clerk of the supreme court, 33 years treasurer of the Georgia Bar Association, 30 years trustee of the University of the South, 50 years senior warden in the Episcopal church. On May 18, 1930, he was given an honorary bachelor arts degree by Oglethorpe University.

JOHNSON DIES Colorful Ex-Governor and Political Figure Was 83 Years Old.

JOHNSON CITY, Tenn., Nov. 25.—(AP)—Uncle Alf Taylor, one of Tennessee's most colorful political characters, who in 1886 engaged in the renowned race for governor against Frank Blair, died here today at the age of 83.

The sage of Happy Valley succumbed in a hospital at 5:45 a. m. from complications following uremic poisoning—an ailment which kept him in ill health since 1929.

Two of his sons were at their father's bedside when the end came. Other members of the family had just left the room. He had been in a coma Monday and Tuesday.

Frank and Blaine Taylor were the last sons to see him alive. Besides the widow, six sons, Frank, Blair, Nat, Dave, Robert and Alf Jr., all of Johnson City, and two daughters, Mrs. Frank Graf, Johnson City, and Mrs. Carter Williams, of Franklin, Tenn., survive.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Friday at the First Methodist church here, with Dr. W. S. Neighbors, of Chattanooga, Tenn., officiating. Dr. Neighbors conducted the funeral services for two brothers of Alf, Dr. Robert L. and Jim, and for their father, Nathaniel G. Taylor. He will be assisted by Dr. Warner D. Doss, of Mobile, Ala., formerly of Johnson City, and Dr. J. D. Derbick, president of Milligan College, and Dr. J. W. Broyles, of Johnson City. Burial will be in Monte Vista cemetery on the outside of Johnson City beside his son, the late Ben H. Taylor.

Alfred Alexander Taylor rose to national prominence through his race for the governorship on the republican ticket in 1886. He was defeated by Robert Love Taylor, campaigned as a democrat.

They spoke from the same platform, they rode through the mountains and valleys of Tennessee together and at the same time in the same boat. They directed sharp barbs at the other party, but throughout their spirited campaign they never made personal attacks on each other.

One night the brothers stopped at a boarding house in Bridgeport, Ala., just across the Tennessee state line. The landlady had heard of their party's admonition not to make personal attacks in their campaign. The woman pinned a red rose on Alf and a white rose on Bob and said:

"Wear these for your mother. I know she is proud of two sons who are fighting politics and still love each other."

Their campaign, in which Bob was successful, became "The War of the Roses."

Alf was famous for his ability as a speaker, and as a fox hunter and he regaled his audiences with his tales. Bob was adept with a fiddle and he fiddled.

The republican brother had left a seat in the senate of 72 to win of the defeated by his brother later went back to congress in 1890 to serve 1871. Robert Taylor died in 1912, a United States senator and a tragedy in Alfred Taylor's life.

Although defeated for governor in 1890, Alf Taylor came back 54 years later, at the age of 72, to win the office with the greatest majority ever given a republican gubernatorial candidate in Tennessee.

For years for hours were Uncle Alf's greatest hobbies. The concrete walk at his Happy Valley farm home near here bears the imprint of the feet of Uncle Limber, the leader of the happy-go-lucky party. There was personal and political sentiment attached to "Old Limber," for in 1920, when his opponents said Alf was "too old" to be governor, he cited the case of "Old Limber."

Garrow, whose demand for a farm board was the basis of the campaign, said he had heard of the case of "Old Limber," for in 1920, when his opponents said Alf was "too old" to be governor, he cited the case of "Old Limber."

Cross Sections of Life In Gate City of South

Gasoline and kerosene tax collections for October exceeded September collections by more than $300,000, Comptroller General William B. Harrison reported Wednesday. They amounted to $1,188,263.22 and compared with $1,194,025.52 collected in October last year.

Advertising concerns are not required to pay taxes on gross receipts but only on commissions earned. Judge John D. Humphries ruled Wednesday in a suit brought by Eastman, Scott & Co. against Paul H. Doyle, tax commissioner.

Court of appeals remitted in the case of Jack Martin, former assistant license inspector, sentenced to serve eight months after conviction in connection with city hall graft cases, was received at the courthouse Wednesday.

Judge G. H. Howard Wednesday entered a plea of guilty to stealing an automobile and was given a sentence of 12 months on the chain gang by Judge Pomeroy. In entering his plea, he stated that he had stolen the car in an effort to get back to his home in New York.

W. M. Ogle charged with robbing R. R. Wood at the Cox-Carlton hotel of $70 of the hotel's money on July 7 was found not guilty by a jury before Judge Edgar E. Pomeroy in Fulton superior court Wednesday.

City convicts will not be dressed in khaki army shirts, it was announced Wednesday following a conference between city officials and Colonel C. A. Bach, inspection general of the fourth corp area at Fort McPherson. Plans are being made to dye the supply of shirts which were purchased recently a dark blue to conform with army regulations.

Miss Jessie Dell, of the United States civil service commission, addressed an assembly of Emory University students Wednesday morning. Opportunities for foreign service were related by the speaker. Miss Dell will speak before the Emory Political Science Club Friday night at a dinner in the Ansley hotel.

Atlanta's planning commission Wednesday afternoon advised the two following petitions: rezoning from dwelling house to business; the northeast corner of Rockford and Ridge-ale, and DeKalb and Clifford avenues.

A case of narcotics was stolen from the Wells, Harris drug store at 438 McDonough road Tuesday night by burglars who entered through the skylight. A United States postoffice substation in the rear of the store was also robbed, but the amount of loss has not been determined Wednesday, according to police reports.

Burglars carted away 4,000 pounds of sugar from the Sophie Mae Candy Company, at 594 Peachtree street, Tuesday night. They entered the building after cutting a hole through the rear wall, police records say.

Thieves Wednesday morning were prevented from taking the contents of the state capital Penny Club boxes by an elevator boy, police reports say. A man posing as a Penny Club collector entered the capital but disappeared when the boy demanded to see his credentials from the club headquarters.

Sam Daniel, charged with robbing Grover C. Tully of a $170 pay roll shortly before noon on September 5, at Lee and Zachary streets, was found not guilty by a jury Wednesday night in Fulton superior court. The case was heard before Judge Edgar E. Pomeroy and consumed all of the afternoon and part of the night.

Walter Branch Allen for a short while Wednesday was under a large, not exact bond assessed in Fulton county when, on the filing of a libel for divorce by his wife, Mrs. Celeste Martin Allen, Judge E. D. Thomas fixed bond at $5,000. He later recommended the order and allowed Allen his freedom pending the hearing of the divorce. Allen is charged by his wife with cruelty and habitual intoxication. They were married December 24, 1930, and separated in September.

Bond hearing for W. Clyde Smith, convicted in federal court of using the mails to defraud in connection with a $500,000 race track swindle game, will be held in district court here Saturday morning. He is seeking to make bond pending appeal of his case. The petition for appeal also is slated to be formally filed Saturday.

No special meeting is to be called for the setting of salaries of Fulton county employees for the coming year, it was stated Wednesday by members of the county board of commissioners. The law requires that these salaries be set 30 days before the first of January. Walter Hendrix, chairman, pointed out, and as the first regular meeting of the month will be on December 2, no special session is required. The commissioners will cut all salaries of department heads by 10 per cent, as voted some months ago, and other cuts previously announced will be made at the same time.

MONTGOMERY GIRL ROUTS BANDITS

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 25.—(AP)—Miss Jessie Roberts, pretty 18-year-old daughter of a Montgomery grocer, her head swathed in bandages covering the mark of a bullet which grazed her forehead, recounted today from a hospital bed how she put four negro bandits to flight last night.

Miss Roberts was in the store with her father, M. D. Roberts, and her mother, when two of the bandits entered on the pretense of making a purchase. They were quickly followed by two other negroes armed with pistols.

As her father complied with a demand to "stick 'em up," Miss Roberts, standing behind the same counter, seized a pistol and started firing at the negroes. One of them wheeled and fired at her, the bullet grazing her forehead, but her steady fire put them to flight, one of her shots wounding the negro who had shot her.

Physicians said Miss Roberts' wound was not serious.

FRENCH MAY HASTEN GENERAL ELECTIONS

PARIS, Nov. 25.—(AP)—The desirability of having a stable government in the saddle before the disarmament conference in February may hasten the quinquennial general elections for renewal of the French chamber, it was reliably said today.

The elections are scheduled for May, 1932, but it is being urged they may be held in January of next year. The government is studying means of legalizing such steps and may resort to a presidential decree of dissolution, which must be sanctioned by the senate. Dissolution is rare in France, and it is presumed the government would rather use some other means.

Premier Laval and his cabinet are said to be disturbed by growing unemployment, which presumably will increase because of such economic developments as the British protective tariff and because of deficits in railroad, telegraph and telephone revenues.

MAL DAUGHTERY WINS SUPREME COURT TEST

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 25.—(AP)—The state supreme court today refused to review the ruling of the appellate court granting a new trial to Mal S. Daugherty, former head of the defunct Ohio State bank, at Washington courthouse, on charges of missing the bank's funds.

Daugherty is a brother of Harry M. Daugherty, attorney-general in the Harding administration. The court overruled a motion of the Fayette county prosecutor for leave to file a petition in error from the appellate judgment. The action requires that Daugherty be given a second trial on four of the five counts of the indictment.

VIRGINIA TAX OBJECT OF CHAIN STORE ATTACK

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Another chain store tax was argued today in the supreme court.

It was the effort of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company to have set aside the Virginia law which imposes a tax on warehouses used in distributing merchandise to two or more stores.

Thomas B. Gay, counsel for the company, said the tax was unconstitutional because it did not apply to warehouses distributing only to one store.

Gay asserted the supreme court decision sustaining the Indiana tax on chain stores and the similar decision in the North Carolina chain store case did not set a precedent in the Virginia case.

Big Crowd Greet Miss Amelia Earhart, Noted Feminine Pilot, on Arrival Here

Atlanta civic leaders turned out to welcome Amelia Earhart, famous woman flyer, upon her arrival at Candler field Wednesday afternoon in an Autogiro. Left to right they are Mrs. Robert L. Foreman Jr., president of the Atlanta Junior League; Luke Arnold, secretary to Mayor James L. Key; Miss Earhart; I. K. Hay, secretary to Governor Richard B. Russell Jr.; and Dr. R. W. Thorpe, first vice president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce. The Autogiro is shown in the background. Staff photo by George Cornett.

Just before a golden sun slipped behind the horizon Wednesday afternoon Miss Amelia Earhart, first woman to fly the Atlantic, set the wheels of her autogiro on the ground at Candler field. A crowd of 600 was on hand to witness the arrival of the famous woman pilot, and so great was the enthusiasm that for a time it appeared there would be difficulty keeping the crowd back from the whirling propeller of the odd-looking craft. An official reception committee, embracing representatives of the state, city, aviation, newspapers, Junior League and civic organizations, was on hand at the field to welcome Miss Earhart to Atlanta and to Georgia.

Within two minutes after Miss Earhart had taxied her plane to a position on the concrete apron she was busy posing for newspaper photographers. I. K. Hay, executive secretary to Governor R. B. Russell Jr., was the first person to greet the famous pilot, and extended her a hearty welcome to Georgia. Luke Arnold, secretary to Mayor James L. Key, extended the city's official greeting. The greetings by representatives of civic organizations and picture-taking occupied at least 15 minutes, after which Miss Earhart went to the hangar (crusty hotel, where she is stopping).

While Miss Earhart had a busy day of it, her looks and cheerful bearing did not in any way betray the fact. Once out of her plane, she slipped off her tan flying suit and appeared in riding breeches and boots. It was getting dark, and as photographers started to take flashlights in the fast-fading light, Miss Earhart remarked, humorously: "Haden't you better wait for the moon to come out to take these pictures?"

Miss Earhart took off from Macon at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning and arrived at Columbus at 10:40, Columbus time. After a greeting there the ship was refueled and checked by her private mechanic, W. A. O'Brien. She then took off on a flight over the city without hesitation, "A licensed mechanic and systematic, periodic inspections." Referring to a friend of his, a civilian pilot, who had asked him for advice on this and that, the army aviator said, "There you are. That man would not have hired a cook without references, yet he lets a man about whom he knows nothing on his hangar, and he trusts his life. Such haphazard methods are the primary reason for casualties in private flying."

The army man went on to explain the system used to keep military planes and motors in proper condition. "First," he said, "a good mechanic is assigned the crew chief. The care of plane and engine is his responsibility. He knows it. Likewise he knows all about the plane and engine, through long, hard apprenticeship. On the hangar wall near the plane is a chart showing every separate assembly or mechanism comprising the flying machine. The chart also shows when each part must be inspected. Certain things must be checked each day, some require attention weekly, others monthly. As this work comes due the crew man does it and puts his initials on the chart as a certificate that he has done it. Thus there is no guesswork about maintenance of army planes. Every private owner must, for safety's sake, follow some such system. Air line operators long since adopted

He stored his ship in the Curtiss-Wright Flying Service hangar.

William S. Brock, who gained fame in 1927 when, with Edward Schlee, he flew from Newfoundland to Japan on a projected air journey around the world, landed at Candler field Wednesday morning on a flight from Chicago to Miami. Flying a fast Wasp-powered Consolidated Fleetster, he landed only for fuel and planned to reach Miami before nightfall. He took off from Chicago early Wednesday morning. Passengers in the monoplane were the Hines, George Harding, prominent Chicago businessman; his wife, and two friends. . . . Lieutenant J. T. Hansell, flying a Curtiss A-3, brought a passenger from Maxwell field, and will return there today.

A prominent pilot-member of the army air corps was asked here recently what he considered the most important factor in keeping flying out of the newspaper headlines, and he answered,

DINO GRANDI DENIES ITALY DESIRES LOAN

Nation's Internal Condition Strong, Says Foreign Minister.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Dino Grandi passed in a day of relaxation and eight-sounding today to declare with a proud smile and in emphatic words that Italy needs no foreign loan; that financially she can stand on her own feet.

Someone asked if he had discussed a loan from American interests with J. P. Morgan, Thomas Lamont and other noted bankers with whom he had luncheon yesterday.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I would have you remember that some months ago my chief, Mussolini, as head of the government, asked for an internal loan—that is the right word is it not?—asked for an internal loan from Italian people for internal needs."

"He asked 5,500,000,000 lira and the Italian people subscribed $7,000,000,000. Now that will give you an idea of the confidence in our country."

"So there was no question of a loan at the luncheon yesterday. Italy needs none. Our internal condition is so strong we are perfectly sure of ourselves."

TENNESSEE DOCTOR HURT IN CLEVELAND

CLEVELAND, Nov. 25.—(AP)—A man who gave his name as Dr. Joseph B. Killebrew, of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., and a young woman whose name he refused to reveal were perhaps fatally injured today when their automobile crashed into a downtown safety zone.

The man suffered a fractured skull and lacerations. His companion, who wore fashionable evening attire, was reported near death from a fractured skull, concussion of the brain and a compound fracture of the lower jaw bone.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Nov. 25.—(AP)—Dr. J. B. Killebrew, reported injured in an automobile accident at Cleveland, Ohio, is a well-known Chattanooga physician. His wife is the daughter of J. H. Wilson, a leading hosiery manufacturer of this section.

FORMER POLICEMAN CONVICTED IN MURDER

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Edward Nolan, former police lieutenant, was convicted last night of murdering Mrs. Grace Murphy Duncan in a drunken jealous rage. The jury recommended life imprisonment. Superior Judge Marshall McComb set Friday for sentence.

Toscanini Will Offer New Work by Respighi

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—(AP)—A new work by Ottorino Respighi, the Italian composer, will be given its world premiere in New York next March by Arturo Toscanini, conductor of the New York Philharmonic orchestra.

The work, which its composer describes as "a mystery—a triptych for concert," is an opera-oratorio requiring a small orchestra, soloists and a chorus. It is entitled "Maria Egiziana," or "Mary of Egypt," and is in three episodes. It is designed primarily for the concert stage.

JURY STILL WEIGHS FATE OF PANTAGES

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 25.—(AP)—The buzzer in the courtroom where Alexander Pantages went on retrial on charges of criminal attack worked overtime today but tonight it had not heralded a verdict from the jury deliberating the fate of the theater millionaire.

The rain predicted for Wednesday and today failed to materialize. "It started out to rain Wednesday but just changed its mind," declared von Herrmann, "the rain has simply passed us by." The temperature Wednesday ranged between 58 and 61 degrees, and this morning the coolest weather of the season is due to arrive with a minimum of 36 degrees, he said. However, later in the day the mercury will climb back close to the maximum of Wednesday and will hover about 60 degrees, he asserted. The lowest temperature for the fall, recorded so far has been 38 degrees.

RAILROAD PETITES FEROUS HOUSE RAGE

Democrats, With Margin of 4 Seats, Prepare To Make Garner Speaker.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—With their grip on the house tightened by Tuesday's vote in Texas, democratic leaders Wednesday moved a step further toward complete harmony in their organization plans.

Withdrawal of Representative Rankin, of Mississippi, from the race for the democratic floor leadership made it virtually certain that Henry T. Rainey, of Illinois, will fill this position, while the Texas, John Garner, sits in the speaker's chair.

The republicans' last hopes that the democrats might be unable to muster a clear majority when the house convenes December 8 were blasted with the election in Texas of Henry M. Kieberger to succeed the late Harry M. Wurzbach, the lone state's only republican congressman. This development left the count in house democrats, 218; republicans, 214; farmer-labor, 1; vacancies, 2.

Only Representative O'Connor, of New York, looms as Rainey's opponent. The Tammany Hall member is an avowed anti-prohibitionist, while Rainey declares he will follow the sentiment of his district on the prohibition question. The Illinois member has always voted dry, but said he had no objection to a referendum.

Leadership of the administration party is the prize at stake in the contest of house leadership Monday. The bitter contest between Representative Snell, of New York, and Tilson, of Connecticut, for the republican speaker nomination, is in reality a conflict in which the party shall lead the party in the probable event the democrats organize the house.

The outcome depends largely on the action of the powerful Pennsylvania delegation of 23 at its caucus Friday. The action of the largest state republican group in the house is expected to forecast who will be nominated at the republican conference.

Meanwhile, the Kansas delegation is sponsoring Representative Hoch; the California group, Representative Harbort; Michigan members are supporting Representative Mapes, and number of northwestern members are looking to Representative Ramseyer, of Iowa. Ohio republicans expect to place Representative Cooper in nomination. How far the favorite sons will go depends upon the closeness of the Tilson-Snell battle.

At least a dozen republican independents are expected to remain away from the republican conference, as they did last year.

Nine independents, including one democrat, Representative Howard, of Nebraska, decided today to call a conference of their group December 4 to "consider and finally decide upon necessary modification of the house rules" of procedure.

In a statement issued at the office of Representative LaGuardia, republican, New York, after the meeting, the group said it had formulated a program for economic relief to present to their bloc. Neither LaGuardia nor Krue, of Minnesota, lone farmer-laborer who called today's meeting, would divulge the program.

Church Members Honored at Dinner By Service League

The Men's Service League, under leadership of Colonel Frederic J. Paxson, were hosts Wednesday night to more than 600 members of the Second Baptist church at a Thanksgiving dinner given in the restaurant of Davidson-Paxon Company. The room was appropriately decorated with autumn leaves, pumpkins and corn stalks in honor of the occasion.

Work of the Men's Service League was praised by those present in a number of inspiring talks. Colonel Paxson stated that "the league has just begun to work."

Guests at the speaker's table included Colonel and Mrs. Paxson; Dr. and Mrs. M. L. Brittain, Dr. and Mrs. Ryland G. Knight, Dr. and Mrs. Luther Christie, Dr. Louis D. Newton, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Patterson.

FLORIDA WILL RAISE FUNDS FOR EXHIBIT

TAMPA, Fla., Nov. 25.—(AP)—The cost of Florida's exhibit at the Chicago Century of Progress Exposition was estimated today at between $225,000 and $250,000 at a meeting of the state commission on the occasion of Governor Doyle E. Carlton to raise the money and supervise the project.

Members of the commission, meeting here, tentatively approved the layout as outlined by Director Carter W. Brown, of DeLand, and discussed the state-wide solicitation campaign to begin soon after the Christmas holidays, continuing until the budget has been subscribed.

Walker Visits Mrs. Mooney On Eve of Pardon Appeal

Governor James Rolph Jr., of California (right), greeting Mayor James J. Walker, of New York, upon the latter's arrival in San Francisco November 24, to plead for executive clemency for Thomas Mooney, serving a life prison term for alleged participation in the bombing of a preparedness parade in San Francisco in 1916. Associated Press telephoto.

BY BRIAN BELL.
SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Mayor James J. Walker, of California, to present a plea for the pardon of Thomas Mooney, started his first full day in San Francisco with a visit to Mrs. Mary Mooney, mother of the convicted bomber.

To humor a cold he remained absent until nearly noon. Then, after a hurried breakfast, he drove to the staid, old-fashioned Mission district, one of San Francisco's oldest sections, to call on the mother of the man he hopes to see released by the medium of executive clemency.

From the Mooney home, he had only time for luncheon before his conference with Governor James Rolph Jr. to discuss the formal hearing on the pardon application, scheduled for next Tuesday.

The mayor was unworried apparently by editorialists in several California newspapers criticizing his appearance in the case and terming his action as "impudent," "improper," and "unbecoming."

He had no comment to make, he said, suggesting "every denial or defense is just an excuse for another speech."

He did not lack defenders, some of the newspaper comment in the state praising his effort on Mooney's behalf as "sympathetic," "sympathetic," and "enlightened."

Blanshard Proposes Boycott To Halt Manchurian Conflict

Asserting that Japan is "75 per cent in the wrong," Paul Blanshard, lecturer for the League of Industrial Democracy, Wednesday night proposed an international boycott against Japan as the surest method of checking the war between that nation and China over Manchuria. Blanshard, here to deliver a series of lectures, spoke before the Atlanta Federation of Trades.

Secretary of War Stimson, according to Blanshard, is doing "a courageous thing" in placing the United States "alongside" the League of Nations, but he said Japan is withdrawing her troops or cease doing business with us. I believe the threat of war can be averted. And if we can once demonstrate the world a weapon stronger than cannon we will start a new epoch.

Japan Aggressor.
Picturing Japan as the aggressor, in spite of international expansion, and China as a new rising national force, Blanshard asserted that Russia does not want to get into the war because it thinks that it is one worth fighting for. Russia, he said, is not yet ready to fight Japan and Japan isn't yet ready to fight Russia.

On the other hand, Blanshard, who is a director of the city affairs committee of New York, pointed out that the trouble over Manchuria has all the elements for making a real war between Japan, Great Britain and the United States, on one side, and China, Russia and India on the other side.

Elisabeth Risdon Near Perfection In Portrayal of 'Good Queen Bess'

Plays about Queen Elizabeth of England are scarce. Perhaps it is because William Shakespeare, living in her reign, could not write about her. If he had he undoubtedly have lost his head.

At last, however, Maxwell Anderson has written a real play about the woman who was called, perhaps in irony, perhaps in inspired understanding, "Good Queen Bess."

Last night, at the Erlanger theater, a goodly portion of Atlanta's theater-going public saw that play in a presentation which, for perfect effectiveness of simplicity, could not be excelled. It is "Elizabeth, the Queen," produced by the Theater Guild.

Last night the Erlanger audience saw an actress play the title role of Maxwell's masterpiece, whose name should live in the annals of the American theater with its immortals. Elisabeth Risdon is a player who brings an artist's conception to every role, whose interpretation and characterization as an artist was tremendously effective when "Strange Interlude" brought her to Atlanta but whose role as "Elizabeth" sets her upon a throne of the histrionic art almost as impeccable and unapproachable as the earthly throne of the monarch she enacts.

Play's Inexorable Power.
The play is impressive in its inexorable power. It stays sufficiently close to the story as we know it in history to be intelligent in its veridicality. It may lay emphasis on some facets of the plot more strongly than the records warrant, but not sufficiently so to be impossible. For history, after all, is but the story as the historian saw it and may itself be far removed from the cause and effect that its protagonists knew.

The plot is woven about the tragic love affair of Elisabeth and Lord Essex. It opens when Essex is the favorite at the court, possessed by a somewhat strange passion for the somewhat older man, then he is admitted that he loves her, hates her, fears her and adores her in a breath. It reveals an Elisabeth, emotionally driven by her love for the younger man, yet fearing all the time that he is power he wants and not her love, that he would raise himself even to the throne upon the stairway of her betrayed heart.

Then Essex is tricked by the intrigues of the court into commanding the ill-starred campaign into Ireland. His letters to the queen are intercepted and here to him meet like fate. She is led to believe that he is leading an army of rebellion against her—yet she will not doubt him and, when again they meet, their love triumphs over every trick of jealousy and court intrigue. Only to once again befall itself upon the overbearing ambition of Essex. This time even unto death.

Great as the play, however, and great as is the performance by Miss Risdon, there are other factors that make its coming a matter of high moment for Atlanta.

There is, for instance, George Blackwood, who plays the role of Essex. A heroic figure with a voice and a presence that make reasonable the love of any queen, his Essex dominated the stage in almost equal degree with the Elizabeth. Brandon Evans as Sir Robert Cecil was the personification of sly villainy while Arling Albright as Sir Walter Raleigh as hot-headed and withal as shrewd as history paints him.

On the staff side of the cast, Renee Lambert as Penelope Gray was charming and genuine. Other smaller parts were played with complete suitability to the production and its atmosphere.

Snowden Takes Place Among British Peers

LONDON, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Philip Snowden, first viscount of Lichfield, clad in robes of scarlet and ermine, took his seat in the house of lords today.

The ceremony of centuries past was altered for the little man who, hero of unnumbered fights in the house of commons, has become a peer of the realm.

Other peers, on taking their seats, have knelt and delivered letters patent to the lord chancellor. Viscount Snowden, leaning heavily upon his two canes, and weighted down by the gorgeous robes of his new office, merely bowed his head.

Lord Chancellor Sankey, in consideration of the physical infirmities of the former chancellor of the exchequer, arose and shook the new viscount's hand, and the necessity of kneeling for presentation.

BOARD RECOMMENDS STAY FOR MANCHESTER

If Governor Russell follows the recommendation made to him Wednesday by the state prison commission, Earl Manchester, sentenced to die on December 4 for the murder of James Parks, will be granted a reprieve until the supreme court passes upon the appeal of Mrs. Sarah Powers, Macon boardinghouse keeper, convicted in connection with the slaying and sentenced to life.

Attorneys for Manchester, who was sentenced to death when the supreme court denied his appeal, sought a reprieve until the court disposes of the Powers case. The woman was first convicted and sentenced to death, but the supreme court granted new trial. She was convicted the second time and sentenced to life imprisonment. Parks was a former Atlanta printer.

The governor also had before him Wednesday the commutation plea of English Gaskins, of Chandler county, convicted of wife slaying and sentenced to death December 12.

At the time of his appeal, Gaskins was given a respite several weeks ago for the prison commission to review the case, but it declined to recommend a reprieve. The supreme court, in passing upon his appeal, divided three to three.

A requisition from Florida for the return of George C. Taylor, a member of the Cuthbert, charged with forgery in Hardee county, Florida, was honored Wednesday by the governor.

6 Missing, 3 Rescued As Vessels Collide

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—(AP)—The Mackay Radio Corporation tonight picked up a wireless message from the steamship Gypsum Prince stating it was in collision with the fishing boat Edith and Eleanor, of Gloucester, in a thick fog bank off the north Atlantic coast and that six persons were missing.

The dispatch stated the fishing boat went down four minutes after the crash. Three persons were rescued, the Gypsum Prince reported.

LEA AND CALDWELL PLEAS OVERRULED

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Nov. 25.—(AP)—Plea of abatement moved in federal court by Luke Lea, Rogers Caldwell and J. B. Ramsey to indictments returned by the federal grand jury at Greenville were overruled by Judge George C. Taylor in a memorandum opinion handed down here this morning.

In overruling the plea, Judge Taylor held that the three defendants must appear at the next session of the federal district court in Knoxville and enter pleas to the indictments charging them with violation of the federal banking law in connection with the failure of the Holston Union Bank of Knoxville a year ago.

The plea in abatement charged that the grand jury at Greenville was incompetent to hear evidence in the case as the alleged offense was committed in Knoxville in the northern division, and that the grand jury was not a northern division of the district. The plea also averred that the evidence presented to the grand jury was incompetent, as the only witnesses were being stirred by passions of the government.

SOLDIER IS KILLED IN BENNING CRASH

FORT BENNING, Ga., Nov. 25.—(AP)—Lieutenant William H. Lambert, of the 24th infantry, died at the Benning military camp today of injuries received in an automobile accident.

Lieutenant Lambert was returning from a hunting trip when his automobile struck a light post in the middle of a street intersection.

Lieutenant Lambert was born in Connecticut, August 28, 1900. He joined the New York national guard at Schenectady when he was 16 years old. During the World War he was in the 5th infantry of the 27th division and served overseas, winning a citation for gallantry in action.

4 NEGRO BANDITS FIRE AT PURSUERS, ESCAPE

Four young negroes Wednesday night fired into a group of citizens, robbing A. E. Chambers, of 825 Carmel avenue, S. E., of a small amount of cash and a watch at Waverly way and Euclid avenue, according to police reports. They escaped.

Passersby on the plaza of the Terminal station gave chase to a negro who was fleeing all the time. M. F. Gerwe, of 716 Lee street, early Wednesday night, as he ran, the negro dropped the pocketbook, but made his escape.

Managers Lewis Haase fortunately was enabled to secure "Frankenstein" for almost the entire week. It will be at the Erlanger through Saturday, with performances every night and matinee today, Thanksgiving, and Saturday.

"Classie, Absorbing."
To the audiences who have yet to enjoy it, let it be said that they will find it a performance by Elisabeth Risdon in the days of that strange queen-daughter of Henry the Eighth, they will be transported into a world of ambition, a battle of loves and loyalties, a struggle for power. They will see and hear a play that is classic in its power yet absorbing in its "good theater."

And they will see a performance by Elisabeth Risdon that takes second place only because of the greatness of the star.

Nowadays worthy performances on our legitimate stage are all too rare. Lowered by the influence of the "starvation diet too long. All the more reason why, when such a play as this is placed upon our spiritual banquet board, we should taste deeply of its deliciousness and savor it to the full.

RAILROAD PROGRAM SENT TO HOOVER

Federal Help Held Essential in Warning Issued by Short Line Group.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—(AP)—A warning that adequate railroad service without governmental assistance is "clearly impossible," was placed on President Hoover's desk today with a four-point program for relief.

It came from a delegation of 22 members of the American Short Line Railroad Association, asking particularly aid for the 54 carriers in that class. Two hours earlier, the president had talked of other railroad problems across his breakfast table with Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio.

Willard arrived at the White House before 8 o'clock. For more than an hour, over coffee cups, he and Mr. Hoover spoke of subjects not disclosed but guessed at.

Speculation centered particularly upon the wage controversy. Willard had just returned from a New York conference of eastern railroad presidents, at which a virtual ultimatum was agreed upon, calling for a voluntary reduction of union wages or forcible action by the roads to effect such a cut.

Provisions Suggested.
Asserting the short lines were "suffering more acutely than the larger roads from automobile competition," the program presented to Mr. Hoover proposed the following:

1. The establishment by congress, as an emergency measure, of a revolving fund from which loans could be made to small roads.
2. Repeal of the recapture clause of the interstate commerce act, under which half of all profits above 6 per cent must be turned back to the government.
3. Interstate commerce commission reduction of truck and bus transportation.
4. The placing of the Inland Waterways Corporation and all other interstate carriers under transportation under the commission.

Hoover Sympathetic.
Bird M. Robinson, president of the association, said the chief executive appeared sympathetic and had asked several questions indicating a thorough knowledge of the situation. He said the relief had been asked as a part of a campaign to save the roads from "the financial integrity of the railroads."

"The financial integrity of the railroads as a whole is so menaced in the present unprecedented depression that a continuation of adequate railway service without some governmental assistance, is clearly impossible."

In most instances the stocks and bonds of the short line railroads are owned by people local to the territory who are most seriously affected by the decline in business of these short lines, as well as the general commercial and industrial depression."

New York Bandits Get $20,000 in Gems

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Three heavily armed robbers bound five persons in a diamond merchant's office in a Fifth Avenue building late today and escaped with $20,000 in gems.

The proprietors and three clerks made no resistance as the intruders drew pistols and lashed their victims to chairs with rope they had brought, sealing their lips with tape.

2 MEN ARRESTED IN SHOOTING FRAY

Charged with disorderly conduct and shooting at another, J. P. Bridges, 22, and T. E. Market, 31, both of Cordele, were held by police Wednesday night in connection with a shooting at the home of a woman who had been arrested Wednesday afternoon by Detectives W. W. Ford and A. G. Stone.

The arrest was the aftermath of a shooting affray in an apartment occupied by Miss Betty Hall, at 1023 Ponce de Leon avenue Tuesday night. W. H. Wash, owner of the building, had reported to police that when he went to the girl's apartment to answer a complaint about heat the two men set upon him, shot him through the arm and the head.

Officers arrested the two men as they were checking out of a downtown hotel and, when accused of taking part in the affray, both said they would drop the matter and shoot himself in a suicide for it. They will be tried in police court at 8:30 Tuesday morning.

AUDIENCE THRILLED BY 'FRANKENSTEIN'

Once, long ago in the 18th century, four people sat around a fire in an English cottage and talked of Gothic romances and horror stories. The four were Lord Byron, Monk Lewis and Mr. and Mrs. Percy B. Shelley. As an outgrowth of this friendly conversation, they all agreed to write a horror story. Shelley and Byron turned out miserable failures. Lewis' "The Monk" had a moderate success, but Mary Wollstonecraft Shelley's "Frankenstein" was acclaimed a masterpiece.

The horrible story of a man-made monster set a precedent, and many followed with similar tales, but none has yet surpassed it. It still lingers and crowds still thrill and shudder at a mere thought of the little German scientist, Frankenstein, and his home-made monster.

The story has been made into a talking picture, after a long success as a stage play, and at midnight Wednesday Atlanta saw it at the Capitol theater. Many of them are still trembling. Without a doubt, "Frankenstein" is the greatest thriller ever shown here.

Colin Clive heads an excellent cast in the title role. We regret to hear Boris Karloff mentioned as the successor to Lon Chaney, because as the monster created by Dr. Frankenstein he plays a part they had alone. Mae Clarke, John Boles, Frederick Kerr and Dwight Erbe are convincing in their roles. The picture is directed by James Whale, and "Journey's End" and "Waterloo Bridge."

Sheer horror and fright, tempered with a love story between Clive, Mae Clarke and John Boles, is the outstanding thing about the picture. Frankenstein creates in his laboratory a monster, which has no heart and is loved by no one. After being buffeted through life, the monster finally turns on the world and in a mad rage murders a little child, thrills before your eyes. A climactic thrill is provided when Frankenstein and the mad monster fight, amid weird scenes. Frankenstein wins, killing the thing that he created.

Blind Tennessean's Golden Voice Wins Honors in Radio Audition

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 25.—(AP)—The world of sightless darkness in which Austin Butner has lived since childhood was a place of excited happiness Tuesday night.

Where previously was only the routine of his job—tuning pianos—today had brought hope of winning the fifth national radio audition of the Atwater Kent Foundation and of realizing a life's desire, to study voice.

Not the least of the 23-year-old dramatic baritone's happiness comes from a vindication of his mother's faith in him.

Last year he said she persuaded him to enter the West Virginia trials from her home in Williamson. He failed there. This year she urged him to try again from Nashville, where he had returned to live. He sang and was announced as the winner of the Dixie district finals.

Round Table Committee Decides Against Indian Military Control

LONDON, Nov. 25.—(AP)—The conviction that Great Britain cannot at this time relinquish control of the army in India to the Indian legislature was expressed by a majority of the federal structures committee of the round-table conference in a draft report made public tonight.

The report was issued after Mahatma Gandhi, abandoning hope of accomplishing anything at the conference, announced he was ready to start his civil disobedience campaign all over again. Mr. Gandhi started packing his spinning wheels and loom clothes preparatory to going back to India.

The declaration that Britain must retain control of the army in India was contained in a report drawn up by Lord Sankey, lord chancellor.

Some members of the committee, the report said, strongly urged that no true responsibility for her own government would be conferred on India unless defense—which was defined as control of the army, including British troops—were placed in the hands of the Indian legislature, responsible to the Indian legislature.

The majority of the committee, however, held it was impossible to vest in the Indian legislature responsibility for controlling defense during the present period of transition. If constitutional responsibility were conferred, these members held, actual responsibility could not simultaneously be transferred.

It was the view of the majority that during the transition period the governor general should be responsible for defense and that he should be assisted by a minister of his own choice, responsible to him and not to the legislature.

FULTON PRISONERS DASH TO LIBERTY

Local Authorities Search for Five Fugitives After Two Breaks.

Baffled at every point, DeKalb and Fulton county officers, Wednesday night pressed their search to new sectors in a search for five escaped prisoners, one of whom was reported a desperate character.

Closely following the jail break at Decatur Monday night, a second dash for liberty was successful when James Wright, serving two months as a vagrant, and W. O. Eden, under 12 months' sentence, fled from the Chesapeake Bridge quarries while Fulton county guards fired at them.

A short distance from the quarry the convicts forced George Johnson, negro chauffeur for V. H. Krieger, capitalist, to turn over Mr. Krieger's car to them.

DeKalb officers were sending telephonic and telegraphic inquiries to Georgia cities and towns in an effort to find J. H. McNabb, Howard Deese and Howard Williams, the three prisoners who fled the jail after bars had been cut through with saws. The prisoners slugged John Willis, turnkey, and robbed Charles Hall, assistant guard, of his keys in their break.

MACON TAX INCREASE PREDICTED BY TOOLE

MACON, Ga., Nov. 25.—(AP)—An increase in city taxes, principally through raising assessments of large property owners, is certain for next year, now that the municipal bond plan has been abandoned, Mayor G. Glen Toole said today.

Cost of Living Going Down?

THE COST OF ELECTRICITY HAS STAYED DOWN and is lower today than ever before

Have you ever stopped to think what rent, food, clothing and other necessities of life are costing you now, compared with the days before the war?

Even when recent drastic price cuts are taken into full consideration, the general cost of living has increased so much since 1913 that the value of the 1913 dollar has shrunk to less than 75 cents when spent for such items today.

On the other hand, electric rates of this Company have decreased so steadily that the purchasing power of the 1913 dollar, when applied to electric service, now has increased to $1.31!

The cost of electricity has never skyrocketed to the high altitudes reached by other commodities. Its cost has stayed low and is lower today than ever before in history.

Study the chart below—showing the rise and fall of living costs (the combined average of food, rent, clothing, fuel, house furnishings, doctor bills and sundries in the average family budget) and comparing them with the cost of electric service to residential customers of this Company.

RASKOB AND THE REFERENDUM.

The suggestion of Chairman Raskob of a prohibition referendum is doubly significant in that it offers a practical way on which both drys and wets can unite in seeking a solution to a complicated party problem, and at the same time marks the withdrawal of Mr. Raskob from his former position in favor of making repeal a direct issue of the campaign.

While the propriety of the chairman of the national committee, or the committee itself, attempting to dictate the policy of the party on any issue is manifest, there is nothing unreasonable in Chairman Raskob's suggestion that the party unite on the referendum plan. This is the very essence of true democracy.

The suggestion is in line with the demand of the American Legion at its last national convention, and with the evident desire of an increasingly large portion of the people of the country who would welcome an opportunity to participate in a direct expression on a problem that has extended its disturbing influence into all walks of our national life.

Not only would a referendum be a happy solution to a complicated problem, but it would remove the last cause for a possible party split. Both wets and drys could unite on it without either surrendering their individual conviction on the subject of prohibition.

The abandonment by Chairman Raskob of his former insistence that prohibition should be made a direct issue in the campaign is another evidence of the give-and-take spirit now being exhibited by democratic leaders.

While openly opposed to our present prohibition laws, he frankly admits that it would be unwise for "the party to take either the wet or the dry side of this highly controversial question."

The realization by Mr. Raskob of the danger in any effort to make prohibition a direct issue in the campaign, and his frank relinquishment of his personal preferences for the good of the party, is a happy augury for democratic success and points the way for harmonious action leading to certain democratic victory at the polls next November.

WHERE NATURE SMILES.

Reports of climatic capers, telling of unseasonable cold, abnormal heat and damaging rainfalls in various sections of the country again call attention to the priceless advantage possessed by the south in its mild and even year-round weather.

Brisk, cool nights and bright sunny days are bringing renewed sparkle to the eyes of those living in this section during a fall of practically normal weather conditions.

No better summer climate is to be found anywhere in the United States than that which prevails over most of the territory of the south, and its short, mild winters give it unexcelled advantages for agriculture, industry and the joy of living.

While the farmers of the north and west are "dug in" for the long winter months of snow, ice and blizzard, crops of various kinds are still in the fields of the south, and our people are happily partaking of outdoor amusements denied to those of sections less blessed by nature.

The industrial workers of the colder sections are going about their duties with chilled fingers and backbones, while roaring fires are necessary to keep humble homes in some degree of comfort. Here in the south the millworkers still have flowers in their yards and the cheerful rat-tat-tat of the carpenter's hammer is to be heard in the sun-filled atmosphere.

There is every reason why the south should be the happiest and most prosperous section of the nation. Given a proper development of the back-to-the-farm and live-at-home movements, the atmosphere of independence, plenty and happiness which would surround each farm home would soon spread its inspiring influence to every circle of endeavor throughout Dixieland.

THE GOVERNOR RIGHT.

Governor Russell has exhibited his usual good judgment in deciding not to call an extra session of the general assembly to consider cotton acreage reduction legislation unless it becomes apparent that such a step is absolutely necessary.

Georgia's farmers exhibited their willingness to cut acreage by the drastic reduction in the amount of cotton planted last spring as compared to 1930. With such evidence of their attitude it is not unreasonable to expect that the reduction agreed upon at the Jackson conference can be effected through organization and co-operation without the necessity of enforcing legislation.

The extent to which public opinion in favor of reduction has been crystallized as the result of the Jackson conference is pointed out by Henry G. Safford, sales manager of the American Cotton Co-operative Association, who expresses the belief that "the conference was more effective toward getting uniform reduction than legislation would have been without the conference because it gave direction to public opinion and started tremendous power toward a definite end."

Properly directed, this public opinion, often more effective than restrictive legislation, will bring about the acreage reduction which is absolutely necessary for the next two years if our cotton growers are to escape disaster.

It should not be difficult to bring every Georgia farmer to realize that he will be punishing himself, his neighbor and his state if he overproduces next year. Even those recalcitrant growers who might not be willing to co-operate for the general good would hardly dare to brave the disapproval of a united public opinion.

The public will approve the decision of the governor not to burden the state with the expense of an extra session until it is shown that only through legislation can the necessary acreage reduction be brought about.

GOVERNOR ALF TAYLOR.

The death of former Governor Alf Taylor, of Tennessee, marks the passing of a public figure unique among the annals of the leaders of the south.

For a half century from the time he was first elected to the Tennessee legislature in 1874, Governor Taylor played a colorful part in the politics of his state, his career being climaxed by the famous "war of the roses" when he, as a republican, and his brother, Bob, as a democrat, stumped the state together as rival candidates for the governorship.

In that campaign, unique in the annals of American politics, "Fiddlin' Bob" won, but when he later went to the United States senate, Alf again ran and won.

Governor Taylor proved during his incumbency of the executive chair that he was richly endowed with qualities of leadership and sympathetic attributes of character that made him friend to great and humble alike.

He was typical in his devotion to duty and country, of the unusual class of public leaders who emerged from the hardships of the reconstruction period of the south, and of whom he was one of the few survivors still remaining in the public eye.

It would unquestionably be a black day, with no rosy future, for the White House guards if they let the "reds" get away with the demonstration they are said to be planning.

The campaign to wipe out the 500,000 rats in Central Park will not make use of "rough on rats," but that's what it's going to be, nevertheless.

Crisp nights and sparkling days is the south's weather menu, while news stories tell of widespread suffering from abnormal weather conditions in other sections.

The British Majority.

Every newspaper commentator in Britain has been racking his brain and wearing out the encyclopedia for a parallel in political history to compare with the tremendous majority piled up by the national government. It seems that there was just one occasion when the majority on the ministerial side was even greater than today. This was in 1704.

There had been only 42 contests in all England, all the rest of the constituencies had returned unopposed candidates. The government was pleased with the result. It felt it had an easy time ahead, little opposition, and that hidden down speedily. But they had not counted on Mr. Pitt.

When parliament assembled he launched his famous onslaught which contained the warning to the house: "You will degenerate into a little assembly serving no other purpose than to register the arbitrary edicts of one too powerful subject."

Lord Rosberry later wrote of this speech that "the effect of this sudden menace in the midst of the government's comfortable arrangements to appease and silence everybody was appalling. It came with the shattering effect of a shell, and a shell falling in some quiet place."

But it is to be doubted if the present huge majority will cause the government to feel comfortable. Britain's troubles, although slowly wearing away, are not over. Much remains to be done.

He immediately went out to investigate, and upon finding a soldier of another organization lying wounded in full view of the enemy, he carried him to our lines, twice passing through enemy machine gun fire in accomplishing this heroic act.

On Thanksgiving Avenue

There are great numbers of people who ought to move on November 26. They are weary of a bad situation, and gloomy surroundings on Grumbling Street.

But we know a good street where, strange to say, there are plenty of houses to let.

The air is pure and invigorating, the water is sweet and wholesome, the houses are good, and the street lies toward the sea so that its gentle rays are felt all day long. The street is Thanksgiving Avenue, a boulevard extension of Fifth street.

More out, my friend, from Grumbling street and into Thanksgiving Avenue, an occupied house on Thanksgiving Avenue.

Why Doubt a Man's Promise To Pay If You Never Have Worked For Him?

By Robert Quillen

No matter how stupid and ignorant a man may be, he regards his own beliefs and his own store of knowledge as the measure and proof of sanity.

Anything that lies outside of his experience is untrue, and any belief he does not share is evidence of an unbalanced mind.

A Copernicus describes the earth as a sphere that travels around the sun and is called a madman and a heretic; yet when the passing years have established his theory as a scientific truism, those who question it are objects of ridicule and pity.

A Fulton declares that ships can be driven by the power of steam and a scornful world doubts his sanity; but when steam is harnessed to drive the myriads of wheels of industry, the world accepts it as a commonplace convenience no more remarkable than sunlight.

The sane are those who agree with the majority; a crank is one who believes or knows something that is hidden from the crowd.

Here, then, is a strange indictment of our civilization. This is nominally a Christian land. The western civilization is a Christian civilization. In two thousand years it has made almost miraculous progress while other civilizations, based on other religions, have made no progress at all except by the sword.

Yet this so-called Christian land has wandered so far from Christ that one who believes in His teachings is called a crank. To assert that He spoke the truth is to invite the scorn that ridiculed Copernicus and Fulton.

Do you think that statement an exaggeration? Do you think this generation really believes in Him?

Third, Paul found renewal of the mind. In dread, wondering anxiously what they shall eat and how they shall be clothed?

"Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness," said Christ, "and all of these things shall be added unto you."

This is true, or it isn't true. If it isn't true, our civilization is founded on falsehood. If it is true, why does fear cause a depression? This age reverses science. Scientists experiment to find proof. Why, then, do men seek so far an offer without a trial to test its worth? How can you be sure of it?

Thankfulness and Courage

BY REV. JOHN R. GUNN

"He thanked God, and took courage."—Acts 28:15.

This was Paul. There was a vital relation between those two things he did, thank God and taking courage. We may look at it from three angles.

First, when he thanked God he didn't forget to thank God for the past, it meant a recommendation to his work and mission. Many hardships and discouragements had confronted him, but he had not given up.

Second, giving thanks brightened his outlook. He saw new hope and promise in the things for which he was persecuted. He saw that, notwithstanding the opposition and privations he had suffered, there was no occasion for discouragement, but abundant reasons for gratitude.

Third, when he thanked God, he renewed his courage. Hence, the renewal of his courage. There is no better cure for discouragement than giving thanks. When we thank God, we get a brightened vision of the future. The result will be a renewal of your confidence and courage.

Look at your own situation. Have you any reason for gratitude? Thank God, and dedicate yourself anew to your vocation and duties. In the act of giving thanks and reconsecrating yourself, you will get a brightened vision of the future. The result will be a renewal of your confidence and courage.

Thankfulness paints a rainbow in the darkest clouds. The thankful spirit is always optimistic. And optimism inspires courage.

Paul's thankfulness was a source of courage in his thankfulness, because in the act of giving thanks he was brought up face to face with God.

He saw God back of his life, back of his mission, back of his sufferings and disappointments, back of his trials. He saw God back of his own life and needs, how could he but take courage? We need to thank God in His goodness and love, and in the blessed sense of personal relationship with Him, until we see Him through grateful eyes.

We must be thankful to really know God. And to know Him, to keep Him ever in view as the source of all our good and the sponsor of our work and purpose, is to have an unflinching inspiration and courage. The heart that sees and knows God is always a brave heart.

Health Talks

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY

TONSILLECTOMY IS A MINOR OPERATION.

I am not quite sure where we should draw the line between minor and major operations, but I fancy if you use the operation it is minor and if I have it it's major.

As recently as a year ago the majority of the regular medical profession were still quite ignorant of the diathermy or electro coagulation method of extirpating infected tonsils and some of the ignorant ones were still insisting that the new method was a fad. But what a vast difference one finds in the attitude of the medical profession today! Now the modern method is available in every town that isn't absolutely dead, and we no longer hear any more of the diathermy method except an occasional squawk from some 22-caliber specialist from the deep woods.

Theoretically the old Spanish custom gave very satisfactory results. In occasional instances it actually marked the beginning of the end of some very focal infection, such as chronic arthritis. But in too many instances, where the patient survived the operation all right and even escaped any serious complication, the results proved disappointing to patient and physician alike.

The former Mr. Tom Mix, who has any confidence in my judgment, that I should not submit nor permit one in my care to submit to old-fashioned tonsillectomy, as long as diathermy extirpation were available at any comparable expense.

SOUTH THANKFUL FOR FIRM BUSINESS

dustrial bureau of the Chamber of Commerce in 1925, 954 new concerns found all parts of the nation and abroad have located in Atlanta. They have given employment to 23,700 persons, involving an annual payroll of $29,114,747, according to statistics released by Mr. Shaw.

The new concerns represent a highly diversified line of businesses. Diversification of its commercial and industrial lines has made Atlanta one of the most self-sustaining cities in the country, and by the same policy, diversification is making Georgia one of the most self-sustaining agricultural states in the nation.

Secretary Shaw reports that the last few weeks have ushered in a new era of confidence among business leaders and that the number of new concerns coming to Atlanta are showing substantial gains over the same period last year.

Atlanta is receiving more inquiries from foreign concerns about Atlanta and some of the more progressive ones are taking advantage of the low cost of living in the city. Atlanta's business and industry are bringing their headquarters to the center of the south.

Another outstanding development during the year that causes Atlanta to be thankful this year is that the report on retail sales in the city placed Atlanta in the forefront. The report showed that Atlanta led the cities of Birmingham, Memphis and New Orleans in total retail sales, the figures being:

Atlanta $165,106,927
New Orleans 158,285,164
Memphis 154,689,164
Birmingham 135,592,061

Atlanta reported that the number of employees working for Atlanta retailers was 27,495, with New Orleans 18,920; Memphis 15,157, and Birmingham fourth, with 14,274.

Atlanta retail stores reported that the retail employees were $23,139,594, or far greater than any other city in the south.

Atlanta reported per capita income that exceeded all other cities—$897. The city's total population is 117,000, with a total of 1,000,000 in the array of wholesale establishments, with approximate annual sales of more than $500,000,000 for approximately 900 firms, representing practically all lines of industry.

Atlanta's great progress as a wholesale and manufacturing center is due to its central location, planning within a few hours' ride to all leading cities of the south and east and to the ports of the country. Its marked progress in aviation places Atlanta within a few hours' ride to all points in the country.

Atlanta's metropolitan area continues to spread and today the population, including the projected suburbs, communities, approximately 400,000, comparing with less than 90,000 in

FULL MILITARY BURIAL TO BE ACCORDED RILEY

Last Rites Today for Peace-Time Hero Who Gave Life To Aid Kinsman.

Military honors will be accorded E. B. Riley, 39, World War veteran, who died Tuesday morning at a private hospital as a result of giving his blood to save the life of a kinsman. Rites will be held at the Immaculate Conception church at 11 o'clock this morning.

A soldier's burial will be given Riley in Crown Hill cemetery, following the services at the church. Three rifle volleys will be fired over his grave, and a bugler will sound "Taps." The firing squad and the bugler will be detailed from Fort McPherson.

Riley, who served during the war with the 6888 Central Postal Directory at Bois, France, last week of October died of a transfusion in a successful effort to save the life of his brother-in-law, Charles Guthrie. One day later Riley was stricken with acute appendicitis, which, in his weakened condition from loss of blood, proved fatal. His dying words, "I am glad that Guthrie was not told of his sacrifice."

A native of Atlanta, he had been employed for 22 years by the Ruralist Press, and at the time of his death was assistant foreman of the electrotype department. He was a member of the Central Lodge No. 20, I. O. O. F., and the Electrotype Union.

Besides his wife, he is survived by four small children, Mary Katherine Riley, and E. B. Riley, Jr., and three sisters, Mrs. W. E. Baker, of Atlanta; Mrs. John W. Daley, of Philadelphia; and Mrs. Robert McDermott, of Miami, Fla.

ATLANTANS TO ATTEND SURGEONS' CONVENTION

Three Atlanta representatives, Dr. Frank Eschwege, Dr. L. A. Williams and Dr. Thomas H. Hancock, will attend the convention of the Association of Seaboard Airline Railway Surgeons in Miami, Fla., December 8, 9 and 10.

The principal topic of the convention will be railway surgery and will be extended to include illness that may be a result of airplane travel. Others Georgians who will attend the meeting include: C. We have more to be thankful for than the Pilgrims had

THANKS TO INSURANCE

THE toils, the worries—the hardships that faced the Pilgrims upon their landing presented no glowing picture of their future. They had dedicated their lives to a principle which during their own lifetime was to bear little fruit. It is today that we enjoy the freedom brought by their sacrifices, and in addition to liberty we can now insure our sunset years of life against dependence and destitution.

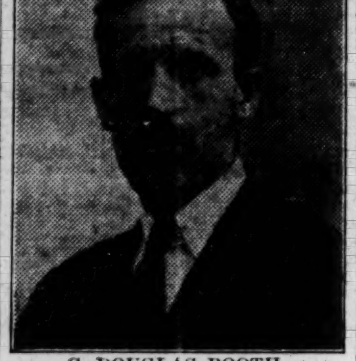

So on this Thanksgiving day let us be thankful for the noble achievements of our forefathers and thankful also for our present day opportunities which through insurance make it possible to guard the happiness of ourselves and our entire family always.

Without obligation we will gladly call and explain the new State Mutual plan with income contract which guarantees independence at 55, 60, or 65 years.

Arkansan Describes Blast Plot to Kill Jealous Husband

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 25.—(AP)—With seeming pride in the ingenuity of his death trap and little remorse that the man it killed was not the intended victim, Walter Nelson, 34, a building contractor, described with pencil and paper to officers and newspapermen in the state penitentiary here today the way in which he dynamited a novelty store at Hot Springs Monday morning.

Nelson was brought here for safe-keeping after he had confessed he set up the elaborate wiring arrangement which caused the explosion, killing J. D. Downs, 27, the manager, and injuring Charles Weaver, the proprietor.

It was planned for Weaver, Nelson said, but Downs preceded Weaver into the store by a few feet and was struck by the full force of the blast. Weaver had threatened his life several times, Nelson said, because of his jealousy of Mrs. Weaver, and at one time "sent a Chicago gangster gunning for me." Nelson denied there was any basis for Weaver's jealousy.

JUDGE BELL BETTER FOLLOWING OPERATION

Metal Obstacle Removed From Lung by Philadelphia Surgeon.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 25.—(AP)—The point of a dentist's drill was removed from the lung of Judge R. C. Bell, a member of the Georgia state court of appeals, in a bronchoscopic operation performed today at Temple University hospital. Judge Bell was reported by the hospital to be in good condition.

The operation was performed by Dr. Chevalier Jackson after X-ray pictures had been taken to determine the exact location of the drill point. Mrs. Bell, who accompanied her husband, and his physician, Dr. Murdoch Egan, of Atlanta, said she expected Judge Bell to be able to leave for home in a few days.

OVER SCORE ENTER CHARITY CAMPAIGN

With more than a score of churches and charities entered in the Good Samaritan buying campaign, which continues for six months, it is expected that the present week will be the most active of the business drive up to this time.

The Gordon Street Baptist church, as the leading church in the first two weeks' phase of the campaign, presented a check Wednesday morning for $120; the Western Heights Baptist, second, was presented a check for $70; the Order of Rebecca, third, received $46 for its efforts to date; and the Jefferson Street Methodist church, in fourth place, was given $24.00.

The prize awards during each remaining week of the campaign will total $130 per week, being divided in the same ratio as governed the division of the greater amounts of the present week.

The following churches and organizations are entered officially: Longview Avenue Methodist, Stewart Avenue Methodist, Order of Rebecca, Colling Memorial Methodist, Bethany Methodist, Grady Hospital Auxiliary, Brookhaven Baptist, Jefferson Street Methodist, Atlanta Good Will Industries, Gordon Street Baptist, Central View Christian, Third Baptist church, Inman Park Methodist, St. Paul's Methodist, Peachtree Road Presbyterian, Park Street Methodist, and Western Heights Baptist.

As quickly as circles or subdivisions of various churches and charities can pass formally upon the question of participation, other entries are expected, and these are urged to act as quickly as possible so that they may have the benefit of the early stages of the campaign. All votes cast in any given week will be given for the weekly prizes of the given week and the totals are carried forward to the final count at the end of the campaign to figure in the distribution of the large prize among the four leading contestants.

It is pointed out again that the votes collected in any week can be cast at any period of the campaign. The Good Samaritan page will appear again Saturday in The Constitution and everyone who is interested in helping any of the organizations already entered or which may enter are urged to examine the advertisements on the page. Each advertisement reveals what constitutes votes. In some cases it is sales slips, in others cash register receipts, in a few cases vote coupons and in others it will be the labels, wrappers, cartons, bottle caps, etc., each of which has a definite value corresponding to the maximum retail price of the package. With sales slips or cash register receipts and coupons, the vote value is in exact proportion to the amount printed or shown, one vote for each cent represented in the transaction.

The second voting period closes Saturday night at 8 o'clock and all organizations desiring to participate for the weekly prize money are urged to cast votes not later than Saturday.

The period for the entry of churches continues for the life of the campaign. A bonus of 10,000 votes is accredited when entry is made in the name of the charity, church or subdivision or branch of any such organization.

Numerous Accidents Show Advantages of Insurance

"Fifteen southerners killed in auto accidents. Georgia accidents have toll of six—highest in Dixie states." This is quoted from a headline appearing in an Atlanta daily paper less than two weeks ago. Six Georgians killed in auto accidents and many injured in one day—yet the number of killed and injured is not unusual for Sunday. The daily number of those injured seriously in accidents is appalling.

Each of those six killed in Georgia and many of those injured would have received instant benefit had they been insured by The Atlanta Constitution's travel and pedestrian accident insurance policy. To the disabled the policy gives $10 a week from the very hour of injury; to the family of the deceased the policy would have paid promptly $1,000.

Accident insurance has become a necessity at any price. Usually such insurance is expensive. When complete protection can be obtained by readers of the daily and Sunday Constitution for almost nothing, about 2 cents per week, it would be almost criminal not to take advantage of it for the sake of your family.

Few family budgets are planned to meet the heavy expenses of accident, injury or death. Any unexpected traffic collision or accident might bring temporary or permanent disability that would be disastrous to the welfare of the family. It should be the duty of Constitution subscribers to take immediate advantage of the protection so liberally offered.

There is no red tape and no delay in obtaining your policy. The simple payment of the $1 registration fee enrolls every Constitution subscriber as a beneficiary of the $10,000 travel and pedestrian accident insurance offered through its reader service insurance department. There is no medical examination and no long delay.

The letter reproduced below is only one of many received by The Atlanta Constitution in nearly every mail. The simplicity of the arrangements, the cheapness of the policy, and the standard reliable protection offered have established the insurance as one of The Constitution's greater services to subscribers.

Policy No. 8207442 was held by Mrs. Kate N. Jolly, 1377 Morningside Drive, N. E. On September 7 she was riding in a Chevrolet sedan which collided with a train near Cartersville, Ga., in which accident she was injured and disabled for a period of four weeks.

"Atlanta, Ga.
"Insurance Department, Atlanta Constitution.
"Gentlemen: I gratefully acknowledge your prompt payment on my accident policy for four weeks for total disability caused by an automobile accident on September 7, 1931. I am fully convinced of the integrity of your satisfactory dealings and the necessity of carrying accident insurance. Subscription for your excellent daily paper gives double returns. Re-hant news and reliable insurance at a rate one could duplicate nowhere else.

"Again I thank you.
"Sincerely,
(Signed) "MRS. KATE N. JOLLY."

This insurance is offered by The Atlanta Constitution to subscribers of the daily and Sunday Constitution and members of the subscribers' families at $1 per policy per year.
Over $130,000 has been paid to Atlanta Constitution subscribers during the past eight or nine years through its insurance service department. This insurance is offered to both old and new subscribers. If you are not already protected with an Atlanta Constitution travel and pedestrian accident policy, you owe it to yourself and family to secure this insurance at once.

COTTON ACREAGE LAW OPPOSED BY MILLER

Alabama Executive Calls Proposed Law Unconstitutional, Unenforceable.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 25.—(AP)—Governor B. M. Miller today termed as unconstitutional, impracticable and unenforceable the plan of the Jackson, Miss., cotton conference for a 50 per cent reduction in cotton acreage in the south in 1932 and 1933.

"I don't believe that Alabama is the key state as every one is telling me," Governor Miller said. "A plan to restrict a farmer from planting cotton would be unconstitutional, impracticable and unenforceable. It would break the state of Alabama to enforce such a law if it were passed."

Governor Miller's statement was made to the delegation from the Jackson conference headed by Dr. Tait Butler, Memphis, Tenn., which called upon him today asking that the Alabama legislature be called back before January 20 to consider a uniform, south-wide law reducing cotton acreage during the next two years.

J. E. McDonald, Texas commissioner of agriculture, told Governor Miller that the plan was not impracticable. "If the south is to be saved from smothering itself with cotton, then it must be by legislation," Mr. McDonald said. "For we have tried the plan of voluntary reduction and it will not meet such an emergency as we now face."

TWO ARE INJURED IN CRASH OF CARS

Two persons, one a schoolboy, were injured Wednesday afternoon when an automobile, reported to have been driven by two unidentified boys, crashed into the parked car of Mrs. Charles V. Andrews, of Tuxedo road, at the intersection of Habersham drive and Pace's Ferry road.

Sarge Andrews, 11-year-old son of Mrs. Andrews, and grandson of Joseph E. Skaggs, president of the Southeastern Express Company, was cut severely about the head, and Mrs. Skaggs, who was a passenger in the car, was badly bruised and shocked. They were taken to St. Joseph's infirmary where both were admitted. Mrs. Andrews, besides being shocked, was not injured. She reported that two young boys in the car were "from Marietta" but that she did not know their names. Both machines were wrecked by the collision.

BIDS ASKED ON REPAIR OF KIMBALL PORTRAIT

Action Taken by Dewberry Following Suggestion of Alderman Coleman.

Bids for reconditioning the handsome painting of the late H. L. Kimball were asked Wednesday by L. Glenn Dewberry, superintendent of the city hall.

Dewberry acted on the suggestion of Alderman Guy Coleman, chairman of the buildings and grounds committee of council, and the painting will be placed in condition to hang in a place of honor in the city hall again, the committee said.

The painting was made by the famous artist, George H. Storer, and presented to the city following Mr. Kimball's death. In moving it to the new city hall it was damaged.

Condition of the picture was called to the attention of Mayor James L. Key by Ingalls Kimball, son of the famous Atlantan, and the mayor and Mayor Pro Tem, G. Everett Millican joined other city officials in pledging immediate action toward preserving it.

Mr. Kimball was one of the city's most prominent businessmen, and more than any other one individual was responsible for removing the capital from Milledgeville to Atlanta.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—(P)—The bond market today greeted the holiday week with a long list of new issues, and with utilities and industrials following on the downward trail.

Dealers were somewhat mystified by the weakness displayed in various new issues, as no specially disturbing news appeared during the day.

The downward action of the railroads was said to indicate that many traders and investors had hoped for a reduction at the general meeting of the board in Chicago December 8, and that the carriers were under a cloud and costly battle to obtain relief.

The average price of 20 utilities and 20 railroads touched bottom at 97, and the total average of 60 corporate bonds registered a new low.

Among the registered new issues were Baltimore & Ohio, which hit bottom at 97, and the same road's 4 1/2s of 1935, Missouri Pacific Southern refunding, S. of New York Central, and most of the United States government obligations and gains being about equally divided.

Most of the foreign currencies, on the other hand, were under a cloud, and a decline to follow in the wake of the domestics and closed irregular.

Investment trusts were again reported as sellers of stocks, and these companies are said to be preparing to dispose of some of their investments in order to present as favorable a balance sheet as possible.

Considerable short selling is going on in General Motors. A man identified with the General Motors Corporation was reported to be working on the constructive side of the market.

Tobacco shares were again offered for sale on reports that the American Tobacco Company had cut prices.

Some professional traders who believe that certain stocks are selling at a bargain, and that they are disposing of some of their investments in order to present as favorable a balance sheet as possible.

Culbertson on Contract

The Worthless Ace.

BY ELY CULBERTSON,
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

Aces and Kings are the ordinary symbols of power in the game of Contract Bridge—Aces because they control the first round of the suit, and Kings because, as second in command, they can usually be expected to account for a trick to the fortunate holder, regardless of whether or not the hand is played on the attack or the defense.

There are deals, however, in which Aces must bow to deuces, and Kings take rank below the twos. These hands are of the suit type; that is, they should never be played at no-trump because the element of distribution overbalances the usual controlling factor of honor strength.

Take the hand below:
South—Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

The Bidding:
(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
1♥	2♣	3♠(1)	Pass
3♦(2)	Pass	3♥(4)	Pass
6♥(5)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—The first indication that Aces and Kings were being quoted below par in this deal. An Overall in opponents' suit is sometimes justified, even when holding as meager a supply of honors as North held in this instance. In support of a heart bid, North's hand is so strong that it is unnecessary to look for a better declaration.

2—Showing another biddable suit. There is no occasion for any jumping of the bids, as North's Overall of the opponents' bid suit, after his partner had opened the bidding, is the equivalent of a Forcing Takeout and neither partner is permitted to drop the bidding until a game contract is reached.

3—West's hand justified a further bid, but he heeds the warning and hopes that even if his clubs are worthless, he may find a Spade trick and perhaps a diamond to contribute to the defeat of a Slam contract by North and South if they embark upon it.

North's hand is not strong enough for a direct Slam bid but does justify a Slam invitation.

Assured of no losing clubs by his partner's illuminating bid, knowing from his own holding there are no losers in spades, and now promised more than adequate trump support in hearts, South correctly bids for a Slam.

It is, of course, unnecessary to point out that the contract was made. In fact, an extra trick was scored as distribution had made of no effect West's strong honor holding.

TODAY'S POINTER.
Question: How many tricks will 5 honor-tricks produce?
Answer: About 8.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS.
Question: When is a Redouble made by the Opening Bidder over an adverse Takeout Double intended to penalize the opponents or to score game and when is it meant as an S.O.S.?

Answer: South West North East
INTor Pass Pass Dbl.
1 heart
Redbl.

In this situation the Redouble by South is not a cry for help, but rather an attempt to score at a low contract or penalize the opponents if they bid. The reason is obvious. Partner (North) still has an opportunity to bid if the Double is left in by West and his hand should be totally unsuited for South's bid, but offers a comparatively safe rescue.

This time the Redouble is an S. O. S., showing an evenly balanced hand and requesting partner (North) to takeout in his best suit. Both opponents have shown strength and if South passes North will have no opportunity to bid a weak five- or six-card suit. His first pass was made without knowledge that the Double would be left in and merely denied Takeout values, which, however, does not necessarily mean that some other bid is not safer if South has a weak

Indian Chief Presents Big Buck to Governor

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 25.—(AP)

M'LEAN INJUNCTION CONTINUED BY JUDGE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—(AP)

An injunction prohibiting Edward B. McLean, publisher of the Washington Post, from prosecuting divorce proceedings in any foreign country was continued in effect today by the District of Columbia supreme court.

Chief Justice Alfred Wheat, who issued a restraining order 10 days ago, ordered it to remain in force until the publisher shows the court it should be vacated. McLean recently filed a divorce action in Latvia.

COURT QUASHES CASE AGAINST WALMSLEY

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 25.—(AP)

Two grand jury indictments against Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley charging improper investment of city trust funds, were quashed today by Judge A. C. O'Donnell in criminal district court.

District Attorney Eugene Stanley, who conducted the investigation resulting in the indictment of Mayor Walmsley several weeks ago, was in the court when Judge O'Donnell sustained motions of the mayor's counsel to quash. He immediately moved for an appeal to an appellate court to be composed of three judges of the criminal district courts.

Warren Doyle, Walmsley's attorney, objected to the motion, contending there could be no appeal.

Judge O'Donnell then directed Stanley and Doyle to confer and arrange a date for him to hear arguments on whether the district attorney had recourse to an appellate court such as he suggested.

CLEVELAND TO BACK
G.O.P. CONVENTION BID
CLEVELAND, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Directors of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce voted today to invite the 1932 republican national convention to this city. The chamber will seek $150,000 in donations to help defray the convention expenses.

J. R. Nutt, Cleveland banker and treasurer of the party, told the chamber that if the money is raised, Cleveland has the best chance of any city to be the convention site. "I think I can convince members of the national committee," he said.

NINE O'CLOCKS GIVE ANNUAL THANKSGIVING BALL

Society Makes Contribution To Penny-a-Meal Club

The Nine O'Clocks, exclusive social organization whose membership is composed of a group of Atlanta's socially prominent men, entertained at its annual Thanksgiving ball last evening at the Piedmont Driving Club, the brilliant occasion assembling several hundred members of society and important visitors. Officers of the organization are: Baxter Maddox, president; Cobb C. Torrance, secretary and treasurer; Hunter Perry, Lawson Kiser and J. D. Robinson Jr., directors.

Autumn decorations combined with Thanksgiving colors provided a colorful setting in the handsome ballroom where dinner was served at tables placed around the edge of the room. Corn stalks, sheaves of golden wheat and boughs of richly-tinted leaves banked the corners of the room and the orchestra balcony where an orchestra played the latest dance music. Cardboard turkey figures adorned the stately white columns flanking either side of the room and the side walls were also festooned with paper figures of the Thanksgiving bird. Suspended above the mantel was an immense electrically-lighted clock, with the hands designating the hour of nine. During the dinner courses several cabaret features were presented for the enjoyment of the guests, among them being three dance numbers in which professional artists took part.

Penny Club Fund.

The true Thanksgiving spirit was emphasized during the evening by the contribution of a large sum of money given through the individual penny boxes placed for each guest by Mrs. Thomas K. Glenn and Mrs. James L. Dickey, the originators and guiding spirits of Atlanta's Penny Club. The sum raised at this brilliant Thanksgiving ball will be given the Penny Club to be used for the benefit of the unemployed.

A number of this season's debutantes attending the ball wore beautiful evening creations and were the center of much attention. Miss Mamie Raine, vice president of the Debutante Club, wore black velvet, and her visitor, Miss Margaret Pillel, of Dallas, Texas, was crowned in Spanish tile crepe. Miss Harriett Wynne wore a model of velvet contrasting an egg-shell bodice and black skirt. Miss Nancy Fredericks was crowned in fuchsia blue taffeta, featuring shirred bands of the same material. Miss Jaquelin Moore wore white satin with trimmings of rhinestones and garnet-colored stones. Miss Catherine Flager wore a model of dark green velvet with shoulder straps of rhinestones. Miss Betty Timmons was crowned in lipstick red moire with straps of white velvet and a large flat velvet rose trimming the back. Ison-Hawkins Wedding Ceremony Is Solemnized at Glenn Memorial

Miss Sarah Hilda Ison and Louis Andrew Hawkins Jr. were united in marriage last evening at an impressive ceremony at 8:30 o'clock at the Glenn Memorial Methodist church in the presence of an assemblage of relatives and friends. Dr. Wallace Rogers performed the ceremony and Charles Sheldon was in charge of the organ selections.

An effective arrangement of arches featured the decorative scheme. Three center arches were flanked by smaller arches of woodwork and ferns composed of myriads of lighted tapers, and each arch centered with a large basket of white chrysanthemums. Palm and ferns banked the altar and candles were interspersed in the greenery and tribly vases filled with white chrysanthemums were placed on the altar. Shepherd crooks marked each pew down the aisles with large clusters of white chrysanthemums and smilax tied with white tulle bows.

Mrs. Roswell Davis Ison, who acted as her daughter's matron of honor, was crowned in orchid satin fashioned with a cowl neck in the front and low cut decollete in the back. A large bow in bustle effect and a short train completed the costume. She carried a bouquet of briarcliff roses and lavender snapdragons tied with pink satin ribbon.

The maid of honor, Miss Martha Ison, cousin of the bride, wore a gown exactly like that of the matron of honor. Her bouquet was of briarcliff roses and lavender snapdragons tied with satin ribbon. The lovely bridesmaids, who included Misses Katherine Gohar, Marguerite Snelling, and Isabelle Roberts, were crowned exactly like the maid and matron of honor and their bouquets were similar.

Little Misses Grace and Rosalyn Ison, cousins of the bride, who acted as flower girls, wore dainty frocks of pink net over pink crepe de chine. They carried baskets of pink rose petals and wore pearl necklaces and bracelets, the gifts of the bride. Hubert L. Jones acted as best man and the groomsmen were E. D. Sutter, E. R. Wilkerson, C. B. Harle, of Rome, and R. D. Ison Jr., brother of the bride. The ushers included J. M. Sharp, of Chattanooga, Tenn.; E. L. Gunn Jr., J. L. Ison and W. F. Ison.

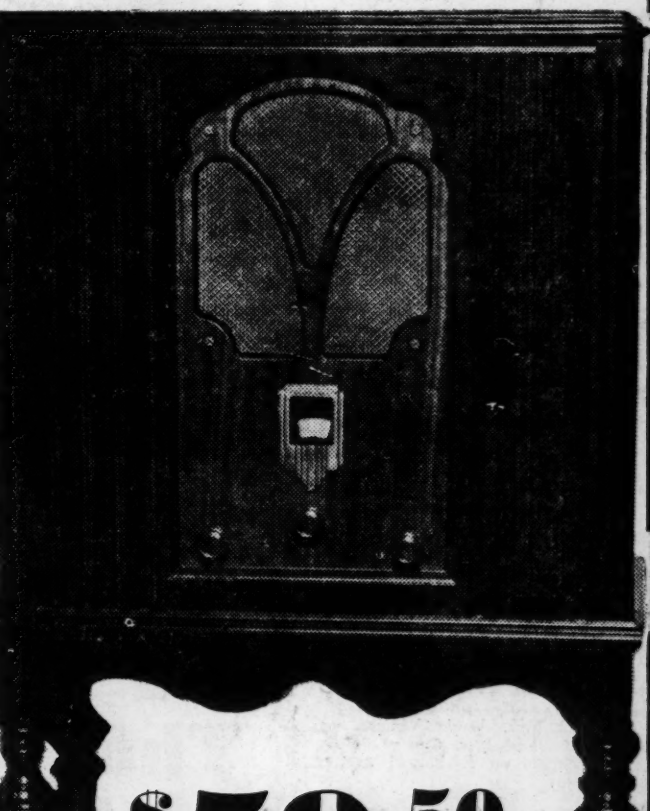

Lovely Bride. The blonde beauty of the bride was enhanced by her gown of white bridal satin cut on princess lines and fashioned with tight-fitting hipline and flared skirt made with two wide flounces. Rare princess lace outlined the flounces and formed the long tight-fitting sleeves and the bertha in cape effect. A soft satin belt terminated in a crushed bow in the back and the train was built on at the waistline. Her veil of princess lace was in cap shape and fastened with a band of orange blossoms at the nape of the neck. Her bouquet was of bride's roses and valley lilies tied with white satin ribbon. She was given in marriage by her father, Roswell Davis Ison.

Following the wedding ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Ison entertained at a small reception at Sadara, their home on Ponce de Leon avenue. Receiving with the hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Louis Andrew Hawkins Sr., and the bride and bridegroom. Mrs. Hawkins was crowned in black velvet and wore a bouquet of gardenias. Assisting in entertaining were the bride's grandmothers, Mrs. Edmund Haring, of St. Petersburg, Fla., who wore black velvet with a yoke beaded in crystals and a shoulder spray of pink roses and valley lilies, and Mrs. L. H. Hardy, who was crowned in black lace and wore a bouquet of talisman roses. Miss Eugenia Candler kept the bride's book. Serving punch were Misses Martha Hearn, Kate Dunn, of Barnesville, Ga.; Elizabeth Sutton, of Los Angeles, Cal.; Carol Combs, of Troy, Ohio, and Jean Barry, of Middleboro, Kentucky.

Mercer's Bears Will Have To Watch These Boys

Harrison F.B. Cimperman

TECH APPEARS

FLAT IN DRILL; GOES SMITH OUT

Jacket Backs Look Nice, Team To See Mercer-Oglethorpe.

By Ralph McGill.

Georgia Tech whirled through a rather lengthy scrimmage against Georgia plays at Grant field Wednesday afternoon which wasn't so impressive, although the boys did manage to look fairly good on offense, Ben Cherry, Pat Barron and other backs getting away for some good gains.

Coach William Alexander was not so well satisfied. The boys looked a little flat. There is no doubt, however, that they will be ready when they meet Georgia on Saturday at Athens.

Reports from Athens were largely the same as those at the Flats. Harry Mehre was in the drums because his boys were not skipping through their workouts with a satisfactory amount of the game.

GOLDSMITH OUT. Both teams are expected to pick up their morale and be keyed up by Friday. At this time of the season it requires a longer period of time to recover from the game of the week before.

Coach Alexander said there was practically no hope at all for Jerry Goldsmith, out with a broken jaw, to get in the game Saturday. His jaw is wired to the upper one and would be protected as was Red Barron's years ago when he played with a broken jaw.

Sid Williams will take Goldsmith's place and start at end on Saturday in the classic at Athens.

CATFISH "STARS." The scrimmage today saw "Catfish" Smith, the Georgia end, catch a pass for a touchdown. It was very surprising to find the Catfish over here. But it must have been him. It was too dark to identify players well but Coach Alexander yelled: "There went Smith right down the middle. Why didn't you break it up?" So it must have been Catfish. It looked more like one of the Gray Devils who were running Georgia plays. And running them rather well.

The Gray Devils, however, had an unfair advantage. Bobby Dodd was throwing passes for them. And there is no one who can throw passes as he can. Georgia will have no passer as accurate as Bob Dodd.

STARTING TEAM. The team which will start on Saturday will find Captain Noel Bennett center, Jones and Laws at guards, Cain and Fincher at tackles and Williams and Lackey at ends.

Roy McArthur at quarterback, Jap Hart and Ben Cherry will run in the backfield. They were running well yesterday. Once Ben Cherry broke off tackle for about 50 yards and a touchdown.

There is a growing hope at the Flats that they will be able to stop the Bulldogs. The boys will be ready when the big day arrives.

Just for a change the team will practice this morning at 9:30 o'clock, between classes, so as to be able to witness the Mercer-Oglethorpe game in the afternoon.

MARIST BEATEN BY FULTON, 12-7

Two spectacular drives in the closing minutes of play enabled Fulton High to beat Marist College, 12 to 7, Wednesday afternoon at Spiller field. It was the only victory for Fulton of the season and the only game in which the county leads have scored, but it was success for the season, as Marist, an old rival, was licked.

It was one of the most spectacular games that has been played in the N. G. I. C. This season and was chock full of thrills. Long end runs, forward passes and short off-tackle line plays were run well by both teams.

Marist scored first in the second quarter on one of the oldest plays in football, a 25-yard pass, H. Lyle to R. Lyle. A 60-yard drive followed and the players lined up for the next play. Roberts, an end, was lying close to the side line and received a 30-yard hand from H. Lyle and stepped across the goal. H. Lyle dropped-kicked the extra point.

Fulton drove to the Marist 5-yard line early in the game but a fumble lost the opportunity to score. Fulton was not to be denied and came back strong in the fourth period when defeat seemed certain. A 60-yard drive with Rooks carrying the ball across the goal, gave Fulton a fighting chance for a tie, but the extra point was wide. Fulton kept driving and after Marist was held for downs, the county leads drove to another touchdown, with Rooks again carrying the ball over the goal line. A 60-yard drive followed and the players lined up for the next play. Roberts, an end, was lying close to the side line and received a 30-yard hand from H. Lyle and stepped across the goal. H. Lyle dropped-kicked the extra point.

THE PORTLIGHT

On Giving Thanks. Those who have found that life needs courage, And that the road is long— Those who have found that the race and battle Are to the swift and strong— Those who have had their share of sorrow, Struggle and strife and shame, Can give their thanks for the fibre needed To finish out the game.

Thursday's Battles. One of the hardest games of the year brings together Pittsburgh and Nebraska. Pitt has a team that looks to be the strongest in the east. Nebraska has bagged the old Missouri valley title and has improved week by week. Here you will have a meeting of two strong lines, but the westerners will need a keen, alert forward pass defense to break up the Panther's air attack. Pitt should win through a powerful line and a first-class passing game.

Kentucky always has given Tennessee a batch of trouble in their annual contest at Lexington. This will be Gene McEver's final game after three brilliant years of backfield football, where he has been among the leaders each season. Tennessee has stars in this game that are among the best—McEver and Hickman, the big, fast charging guard. Tennessee has the call here but the margin will probably be tight.

Holy Cross and Boston College—always a rousing whirl—will be just as good. And Holy Cross has the stronger chance.

The defeat Cornell took from Dartmouth has done Gil Dobie's team a world of good. It brought the Hawks back to the top of the college football list. Pennsylvania will find Ferraro and Viviano two of the best backs the Red and Blue has faced this season, not even barring the Notre Dame assortment that stormed up and down the field. There should be a lot of action in this game, but Cornell looks good enough to win.

Colgate has come along in a hurry since the N. Y. U. defeat and now looks to be one of the strong teams of the east. In Captain Orsi, Colgate has one of the star ends of football. He has been a high-class defensive player, but Cornell looks good enough to win.

The Gray Devils, however, had an unfair advantage. Bobby Dodd was throwing passes for them. And there is no one who can throw passes as he can. Georgia will have no passer as accurate as Bob Dodd.

Neyland's Vols To Play Violets in Charity Tilt

December 5 Game at Yankee Stadium Eliminates Chance of Tulane Play-off.

By Alan Gould, (Associated Press Sports Editor.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—(AP)—The University of Tennessee's Volunteers, who have compiled the best six-year winning record of any major college football team in the country, today accepted an invitation to play college football for charity at the Yankee stadium December 5, thereby adding a brilliant attraction to the already impressive post-season gridiron program.

The game was arranged through the initiative of the mayor's committee on unemployment relief, and announced by Chancellor Elmer Ellisworth of N. Y. U. The city of Knoxville, where Tennessee is located, will receive a percentage of the gate receipts, which are expected to exceed $100,000 at prices of $1, $2 and $3.

The services of the two teams, as well as the use of the stadium, have been donated without charge, so that the proceeds will go 100 per cent for unemployment relief here and in Knoxville.

The game eliminates the chance of the proposed play-off between Tennessee and Tulane, undefeated rivals, for the Southern conference championship, but it embellishes a post-season slate for the Volunteers. A 60-yard drive followed and the players lined up for the next play. Roberts, an end, was lying close to the side line and received a 30-yard hand from H. Lyle and stepped across the goal. H. Lyle dropped-kicked the extra point.

Fulton drove to the Marist 5-yard line early in the game but a fumble lost the opportunity to score. Fulton was not to be denied and came back strong in the fourth period when defeat seemed certain. A 60-yard drive with Rooks carrying the ball across the goal, gave Fulton a fighting chance for a tie, but the extra point was wide. Fulton kept driving and after Marist was held for downs, the county leads drove to another touchdown, with Rooks again carrying the ball over the goal line. A 60-yard drive followed and the players lined up for the next play. Roberts, an end, was lying close to the side line and received a 30-yard hand from H. Lyle and stepped across the goal. H. Lyle dropped-kicked the extra point.

THE CATS SEEK TO HALT VOLS IN TITLE RUSH

Tennessee Favored; Mercasins Play Center for S. I. A. A. Title.

By Dillon Graham, Associated Press Sports Writer.

Southern football fans today turn their attention toward Lexington, Ky., where Tennessee faces Kentucky in the first game of its long, unbeaten campaign.

This game, with its possible settlement of the Southern conference championship for 1931, overshadows both even the half-dozen long-standing traditional contests arranged for Thanksgiving Day.

Tennessee will rank as the favorite, but Kentucky admittedly possesses a strong team and a team that always produces its best games against Tennessee. A Tennessee victory will end the Volunteers' claim as one of the conference honors along with Tulane, while a Kentucky triumph will drop the Tennesseans among the conference eleven and present the Dixie crown to Tulane.

On several previous occasions in recent years, Tennessee has advanced to this contest with flying colors, only to be defeated by the Wildcats. The game will match two of the best backs in the south, McEver of Tennessee and Kelly of Kentucky.

In 1920 Tennessee could not score a touchdown against the Wildcats but two fields goals and a safety gave the Vols the game and the Beer Key. At that time the winning team in this annual contest has kept for the past seven years.

Today's games bring the season to a close for the southern teams. Several have remaining scheduled games, while others have arranged charity games, but the great majority will play their last contests today.

The Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association championship will be at stake at Chattanooga, Tenn., as Centre College, of Kentucky, and the University of Chattanooga, both unbeaten in the association, tangle in their yearly association.

TARHEELS VS. CAVALIERS. The North Carolina-Virginia game at Chapel Hill, N. C., takes precedence among the games of traditional rivalry by virtue of the length of time these teams have met in annual combat. Since 1895 these teams have played 32 games, of which Tennessee has won 13, Virginia 13, and the game has been a tie 6 times.

Another outstanding game brings together the University of North Carolina and Virginia Military Institute at Roanoke, Va., for their twenty-ninth game. Another twenty-ninth meeting between conference teams pits Mississippi against Mississippi A. & M.

Maryland goes out of the conference for its twenty-third game with Johns Hopkins at Baltimore. A victory would give the Terps a record of 10 wins and 3 losses.

Two other conference games are arranged, Vanderbilt playing Alabama at Nashville and Auburn battling South Carolina at Montgomery. The game at Clemson at Greenville, S. C.

Three Dixie teams have intercollegiate opponents. Florida plays U. C. L. A. at Los Angeles, Howard entering the contest at Santa Clara at New Orleans.

Other games include Southwestern at Houston, Mississippi State at Chattanooga, West Kentucky and Georgetown at Bowling Green, Ky., Miami and Stetson at Miami, Fla., Mississippi and Mississippi State at Jackson, Miss., and Arkansas at Shreveport, and Mercer and Oglethorpe here.

Piedmont League Head Is Renamed

DURHAM, N. C., Nov. 25.—(AP)—William G. Brannan, head of the Piedmont league for 16 years, was re-elected president for a five-year period by unanimous vote of the directors today. John T. Rees, of Greensboro, was named vice president.

A committee was selected to draft the 1932 schedule. Next season's season ticket sale will be held at the University of North Carolina. The league will be divided, the directors, by unanimous vote, deciding on a split season.

Winston-Salem was the only club to drop out of the league. The season not represented at today's meeting.

Under a new system inaugurated this year the Bulldog squad has been divided into two sections under the supervision of a coach. Each section of the squad has played at least one quarter in each game, the group now best being allowed to play the fourth quarter.

PETRELS TO MEET BEARS HERE TODAY

Superb defensive game and won, 2-0, on a safety. The scene shifts again to Atlanta and the unexpected may happen again here. The Bears is the season's finale for both teams.

Six Petrels make their final bow today. They are Clay Sybert, Claude Mercer, Dapper Myers, Frank Anderson, J. Parker Bryant and Paul Goldsmith. The latter, of course, is out of it.

The Marriage Racket - By VINA DELMAR

INSTALLMENT XXXIII

"Guess I am. Well, for a beginning I'll tell you that my marriage is on the w. k. rocks."

Bill wrinkled his brow and said, "No, he hasn't another lady. He doesn't even want the one he's got."

"Say, you didn't drag me out of bed to tell me about a pre-breakfast quarrel, did you?"

"Lord, no. This is the real stuff. Bill. He and I are as flush as hell."

"No fooling. How come?"

"Well, Mildred ran off yesterday and got married. Wallace thinks I arranged her running away in order to get rid of her."

"O. Bill, you wrinkled his brow and considered the matter. 'Didn't you?' he asked after a time."

She knew he was thinking of the Halloween party which Mildred had planned and which had not come off as per schedule.

"No, I didn't, Bill. I told Wallace that I didn't, but he wouldn't believe me. I think you will, however. You see I'm fond of Mildred."

"O, I believe you didn't if you say you didn't. That isn't the point. What I'm trying to get at is the fact that you're through with Wallace because he thinks you shipped the kid off."

"O, there's more to it than that, Bill. Naturally I got sore and we told each other a lot of things that would have been better unsaid. Our marriage was a funny kind of thing anyhow. He and I both used each other as pegs to hang our favorite dream upon and now we've kind of forgotten what the dream was we're so busy finding fault with the peg."

"Yes, it was sort of funny. Bill's lips drew together in a hard, tight line. 'The trouble between you and Wallace goes deeper than Mildred's running away. Wallace married a hard, little, self-sufficient dancer. He gave her love, a home, a child, three meals a day, and how does she show her gratitude? She turns out to be a wife! If he'd wanted a wife he could have picked from three to four possibilities not a stone's throw from here.'

"Don't fool yourself, Bill. He wanted a wife. He's conventional as the devil, you know."

"Granted, my dear. He wanted to marry you, of course. He's too shrewd a business man not to get a contract. But he certainly didn't pick you because he expected a model housekeeper. He wanted you to stay the little wisecracking wife he married. And look at yourself. You go in for mothering in a big way. You translate your choicest expressions into Thracian. You love your fire-side and start reading books on bridge, psychology and color. My God, Irma, how you misrepresents yourself to Wallace!"

"You're dead wrong, Bill. Every time I'm a little different from Anne I get the devil for it."

"Certainly, because you started to be a wife the minute you stepped over his threshold. He's been waiting now what you used to be like. The first time you sewed a button, or washed a dish, or complained to the butcher about tough meat you became a wife. He's forgotten what you were but he's vaguely uncomfortable aware that something went wrong with his plans."

"Well, maybe you're right. Anyhow, he and I are finished with each other. I want to go to New York today and start life over. Maybe I can get my legs long enough to go to work again."

"You'll take the baby, won't you?" She smiled slowly. "What do you think, Bill?"

"Yes, that was a foolish question, wasn't it?"

The waiter arrived with Bill's breakfast and a fat, friendly-looking Irma. Neither spoke for several minutes. The waiter seemed to enjoy bustling about the table rearranging the angles of the salt and pepper shakers and making quite certain that everything was satisfactory.

When at last he withdrew Bill said, "I'll be sorry when you're gone, Irma."

"Fact is," she said, "I don't see how I can go unless you're real big about the matter. I called around to see if you'd lend me $500. If I were going alone I'd ask you for fifty, but I've got to keep the baby in a decent place and get some one to mind him while I hunt a job."

"Yes, that will cost money," he said.

"I hate to ask you, Bill, but I'll return it as soon as possible."

"I know you will, Irma. As a matter of fact I'm pretty flush at the moment. Don't be in a hurry to pay me back."

"Thanks."

"Well, kid, I guess I'll never see you any more, eh?"

"Why not?" She asked the question lightly but wondered even as she spoke how they ever would see each other again.

"I'll tell you why not," he planted his elbows firmly on the table and leaned toward her. "You'll fall into the pitfalls of the big city. You'll write me a note when you return the money and then you'll forget me."

"I'll never forget you. You're the best friend I've ever had."

"You'll have better ones, Irma. Thracians played hell with your personality but it didn't do a bit of harm to your looks."

"I hope not. I've got to get a job."

"Well, tell them I said you're a ravine, tearing beauty. Listen, if you have any trouble-money trouble-you'll let me know, won't you?"

"That's not bunk, is it?"

"It certainly isn't. You'll have wires, letters and telephone calls the first day I can't afford a nurse, a decent bed, the best food and at least one nice toy for my baby."

He laughed. "Well, I won't worry, then, but take care of you, too, Irma. You know, I—"

He stopped speaking and shifted his gaze from her face. When he looked at her again he said: "I'll probably take you a little time to get limber again, won't it? Too bad you didn't keep up your practicing. Of course, you couldn't know in advance that you'd be back in it again."

"No, I didn't."

"Say, how about Wallace and the baby? Won't he have fits when his second child gives him the air?"

"No, he doesn't care about the baby."

"That's a crazy idea, Irma. Of course, he does."

"But, my God, you can't take a child away from his father!"

"Who can't?"

"Well, maybe you can at that."

"Be at the 1 o'clock train if you have any doubts."

"Will you be going that soon?"

"Um, 'Tomeorrow, I think I'll be leaving around in a pair of bloomers trying to kick as high as a duck's knee which will probably be an effort."

"It shouldn't be. You were a pretty good dancer."

They did not linger over their coffee. Irma was anxious to get to her packing and a nervous restlessness seemed to have suddenly assailed Bill. She waited in the hotel lobby while he crossed the street to his bank and got several clean, crisp bills for her. When he came back they stood for a moment solemn and silent as though at the side of a closing grave.

"You won't be seeing Wallace again?" he asked presently.

"No. You can tell him anything you want to. It's immaterial to me whether this matter's a secret or not. Do what's easiest for you."

"I'll tell him, I think."

"All right." She took a step toward the door and held out her hand for him. "Good-by, Bill."

"Good-by, Irma. Lots of luck. Take care of yourself."

"I will. I'll write to you."

"Will you? That'll be fine."

She smiled and a little strained, she thought, and his words unnaturally pat. Very much in the mood of a message written on a postal card.

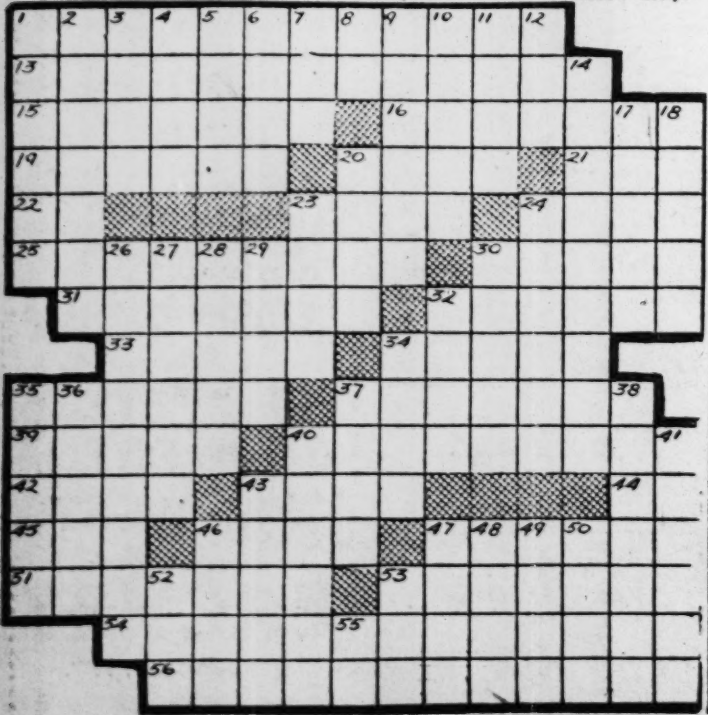

"Well, good-by."

"Good-by."

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondence invited. Your name held in confidence. Write Miss Chatfield, care The Atlanta Constitution.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:

I know of a sweet girl who has been going with a man for several years. Each loved the other devotedly. The man came of one of the state's most distinguished families. He was highly educated, cultivated to a degree. He would have done anything to make the girl happy but the one necessary thing. He often got on nerves and during this time he would remain in hiding until it was all over, which was usually two weeks. That was his only fault. I never saw a man love more deeply. Recently he was taken ill and died. In his delirium he called for her constantly. The girl is prostrated with grief. She is wondering if she did wrong not to marry him and make his last days happy. What do you think?

ANSWER:

There is pretty good circumstantial evidence that the author of this letter is the girl in question. To her I would offer comfort with the words of a wise clergyman, ripe in experience, who testifies that in his 30-odd years of ministry he had never seen one bereaved person mourning the dead that didn't voice some regret about his failure to the dead loved one. It is perfectly natural for the living to agonize over real or fancied failures to the dead. The very fact that communication is completely cut off by death makes the living strive and cry to speak the words of justification or explanation into ears that cannot hear, and to yearn to her in return the words of acceptance and understanding from lips that cannot speak.

You may comfort yourself with the thought that if you had actually married the poor fellow there would have been something else with which you would have reproached yourself. Perhaps then you would have said to yourself that by marrying him before he had given up drink you had taken away from him the one incentive to give it up. Then you would have counted yourself responsible for his death. Don't you see that death inevitably involves such regrets?

Nobody can tell a woman that she should have married a man who was addicted to drink. Of course, she didn't know he was going to die. She might have made the supreme sacrifice and have married him, if she had known. But then we never know what the future has in store and we can only do the best we know. And if, as O'Neill has his Lavinia (Electra) to say: "The dead have forgotten us and we have forgotten the dead." There is nothing in a past to worry about. And if, as we think, the dead haven't forgotten us, nor we about, they see the aching heart that yearns toward them and it is enough.

Burgess Children's Stories

RUNTY POSSUM.

BY THORNTON W. BURGESS.

If just by size you always judge I've naught to say but just, Oh fudge!

—Mother West Wind.

In a big family of children no two are ever just alike. No, sir, they never are. They vary in size, in looks, in character and in disposition. It was just so with the little Possums. You know, there were 12 little Possums, all the same age. Some were bigger than others. Some grew faster. Some were bold and some were timid. Some were naturally obedient and some were inclined to be disobedient. Some were cautious and some were heedless and careless.

The smallest of them was called Runty because he was so small. He was small to begin with and somehow he didn't grow as fast as his brothers and sisters. It wasn't because he didn't get his share of food, for he did. Some of the others thought he got more than his share, for they thought Mother Possum favored him because he was so small. She didn't. It was simply because he was quick and smart that he got his full share and sometimes a little more.

When Uncle Billy saw him for the first time he was inclined to be sorry for Runty. "Ah reckon Ah will have to keep an eye on that little fellow 'n' see that he is fairly treated by his brothers and sisters," thought Uncle Billy. "Ah reckon he won't have much chance with all those bigger brothers and sisters. Po' little Possum! Ah'm afraid he won't have much chance in the Great World."

But it wasn't a great while before Uncle Billy changed his mind. Runty was smart. There was no doubt about it. And being as quick as he was smart, there wasn't much that he missed. If his mother or Uncle Billy found something especially good to eat Runty was always handy to get his share. He got there first.

"Ah reckon," said Runty to himself, "that the way to learn is to watch those who know. It is all right to find out things for mah own self, but it is quicker and safer to learn from others what they-all have already found out. We'll have a lot to learn befo' we goes out in the Great World, and the best way is to learn it from those who already know it."

Now, this was real wisdom on the part of that little Possum as you must admit. He watched his mother and he watched Uncle Billy and he did as they did without knowing just why they did certain things. That knowledge would come later, as he was to find out. So by imitating them he learned a great deal without really knowing that he was learning things. It was most important for young Possums to know if they would group up. When one of them stopped to listen he always stopped to listen. When one of them poked a sharp nose under an old log he did the same thing, and thus learned that sometimes fat beetles or grubs were to be found in such places. Many other things he learned in the same way, and what he learned he didn't forget. So while Runty was the smallest he was also the smartest of all those little Possums.
